Russia Rejects Peace Bid, May Quit League

Scheer Sinks 10,000-Ton British Ship, 70 Aboard

Fate of Doric Star's Crew Unknown After Attack by Nazis In South Atlantic

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 4.—The 10,086-ton steamship Doric Star was reported sunk in the South Atlantic today by the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer.

The admiralty announced the Doric Star, a Blue Star Line vessel homebound from New Zealand and Australia, had been "attacked by a German raider."

She had a crew of 70 and accommodations for six passengers. It was not known whether any passengers were aboard. The admiralty statement added:

"As no further information has been received it is presumed she has been sunk."

Unofficial information was to the effect she had been sunk in the South Atlantic, and that the raiding warship was the 10,000-ton Admiral Scheer. No details of the fate of the crew were made known.

The British fleet has been hunting the Admiral Scheer and her sister pocket battleship the Deutschland since the early days of the war.

The Admiral Scheer was first reported in South Atlantic waters when she sank the British freighter Clement off Bahia, Brazil, October 2. Survivors later identified their attacker as the Admiral Scheer.

Reported Off Africa

She last was reported off the east African coast November 16, when some survivors of the British tanker Africa Shell said the Admiral Scheer attacked. Other survivors said the raider was the Deutschland.

The Deutschland was last reported in the north Atlantic, where she destroyed the British merchant cruiser Rawalpindi.

An authoritative source said today that Britain had devised a "very satisfactory" new secret weapon to combat German magnetic mines.

Announcement that fishermen volunteers on trawler minesweepers were using a new method closely guarded by the navy came as the Allied blockade of German shipping was extended to include the seizure of German exports even though carried in neutral ships.

Metal Nets Suggested

Neutral experts commented that it was feasible to drag metal nets between two wooden trawlers to detonate the mines harmlessly.

(Reports reaching Washington last week said the British had discovered also that magnetic mines could be exploded by sound waves. Berlin sources said they believed Germany would lay a belt of magnetic mines around the British Isles and the region would be declared a danger zone in retaliation for the exports blockade.)

Two steamers were reported sunk by mines. The 3,829-ton British freighter Eskdene went down and her crew of 29 was landed in Scotland. It was disclosed the 2,159-ton Swedish freighter Rudolf was sunk yesterday off the British coast. Her crew of 23 escaped in lifeboats.

A German minelayer was reported sunk off the Danish coast after striking a mine. Only two of the crew, believed to have numbered 50, were found.

Thirty-three German merchant ships were reported put out of action in the three months of war. The loss totaled 171,390 tons, the report said.

A British mission headed by Ronold Hibbert Cross, minister of economic welfare, arrived in Paris by airplane and conferred with French officials on means of applying the British-French embargo.

Soviets Spurn Meeting on Finn Appeal To Arbitrate

Peace Bid Rejected

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Tuesday), Dec. 5.—Russia today gave indication of following Germany out of the League of Nations as a result of her demands on Finland.

She declared she would ignore the proceedings if the League goes through with its summoned meetings next Saturday and Monday to consider Finland's protest at invasion of Finnish territory, and complained of lack of "respect" for Moscow by the League secretariat.

At the same time, in reply to the Swedish Minister, Premier Molotoff rejected mediation overtures on behalf of the Finnish government, declaring that "so-called government" had left the capital for an unknown destination and that there could be "no question of any negotiations" with a government the Soviet does not recognize.

Arbitration Termed Unjustified

Replying to notification of the meetings, Molotoff sent the League secretary-general a message in which he called Finland's appeal for arbitration of their conflict "unjustified" because:

"The Soviet Union is not in a state of war with Finland and does not threaten the Finnish people with war."

Russia is maintaining "peaceful relations" with the puppet "people's" government of Finland which, the Soviet has declared, was proclaimed on Finnish soil at Terijoki last Saturday. The town has been occupied by Russian military forces.

The Finnish government at Helsinki has "now resigned its powers" and the petition to the League was not made by "authorized representatives of the Finnish people."

Military Advances Claimed

Russia has "settled all questions" by her mutual assistance treaty with the Terijoki government, concluded last Saturday.

Molotoff's denial of a state of war with Finland, however, did not prevent the Leningrad military headquarters from issuing its regular communique last night claiming deepening advances into Finnish territory.

This communique asserted the Red army had reached 22 miles south of Petsamo in the Arctic campaign, and had struck about 30 miles deep on the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad. Gains also were reported north of Lake Ladoga.

Molotoff's reply to the league was directed to Secretary - General Joseph A. C. Avenol, who had notified the Soviet government of Finland's action in bringing the conflict before the league.

While Molotoff did not say that Russia would withdraw permanently from the League, he made plain his displeasure.

Hazen to Ask 'Block Timing' Consideration

Advisory Council to Consider Installing System in District

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner Hazen will ask the Traffic Advisory Council to consider installation of a "block" timing traffic signal system on main thoroughfares, he announced yesterday.

The council also will be requested to investigate the practicability of increasing speed limits on major arteries. Specifically, he suggested that the changes be considered on an "experimental" basis for Thirteenth and Sixteenth streets northwest.

The Commissioner said his action was prompted by the belief that present rush-hour chaos here is caused principally by failure of the signal lights to facilitate mass traffic movement.

Under the "block" timing system, lights would show all green or all red for greater distances than under the present "progressive" timing setup.

Hazen discussed the proposed reforms with Engineer Commissioner McCoach and it was agreed to obtain an opinion from the advisory council.

"I feel," said Hazen, "we should at least try these changes on one or two streets and see what happens. I will ask the advisory council to give the subject careful thought."

Farm Industry Ruled Subject To Trust Law

Milk Decision by Supreme Court Held 'Go' Sign to Arnold

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the antitrust laws apply to farmer cooperatives and to commerce in farm products as well as to industry generally.

Except for fixed grants of immunity by Congress, the court held that Sherman act condemnation of private action in restraint of trade "remains untouched" by recent farm legislation.

A unanimous opinion written by Chief Justice Hughes decided specifically that milk handlers in the Chicago marketing area can be prosecuted under the monopoly laws.

Further clarifying the scope of the antitrust statutes, the decision apparently gave a green light to Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold's "trust-busting" prosecutions on a wide front.

The high court passed over the question of whether the Sherman act applies to labor union activities, but it lent some support to the Justice Department position that it does, by ruling farmer cooperatives subject to antitrust restrictions.

Hughes said union officials' contention that labor organizations are exempt from the antitrust laws "is not open on this appeal."

"The District court did not construe the Sherman act as inapplicable to these defendants (Milk

U. S. Studies Finnish Debt; Borah Advocates Relief Step

By Felix Cotten

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed yesterday the Administration was studying the question of the Finnish war debt to the United States Government.

He declined to comment on a proposal by Senator Borah, Idaho Republican, that an arrangement be made whereby Finland would be relieved of installments on her debt pending an adjustment of the debt by Congress.

Borah said last night that he would like to see such a plan worked out. Official sources pointed out any final adjustment of the debt would be up to Congress.

One question raised was whether Finland would come under the Johnson act ban on loans to defaulting nations in case payments were not continued.

There was no evidence, however, that the December 15 installment, which amounts to $234,693, would not be paid. Finland has indicated payment will be made.

Moreover, the State Department has handed Finland the December bill. It was included in December 15 bills totaling $2,430,730,897 sent to all governments owing war and postwar debts to the United States.

They were sent to the diplomatic representatives of the governments. Except in the case of Finland, it is a perfunctory process. The rest have been in default for years.

Officials Here Set on Keeping Envoy in Soviet

Woll and Vandenberg Join Movement for Breaking Relations

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Determination to maintain diplomatic relations with Russia, unless future events call insistently for a break, was reported in Administration circles last night in the face of steady pressure for a rupture.

Disadvantages to this country's world position from such a development were said to have been weighed by officials, in view of the realization that severance of relations would constitute only a rebuke, likely to have little or no effect on Russia, and be of no material help to Finland.

This attitude was perservered in while calls for a diplomatic break were repeated by Matthew Woll, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the League for Human Rights, Freedom and Democracy, and Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican, of Michigan.

In official circles it was pointed out that taking such a step would lessen this country's potential ability to help restore peace and deprive it of an important listening post in the difficult situations in Europe.

A source close to the White House, indicating that serious consideration had been given to the proposal, made it clear that there was at

1,500 Russian Troops Taken, Finns Claim

Nation Steels Self For Fiercer Attacks By Land, Sea and Air

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Dec. 4.—Fighting Finland tonight claimed new successes against Russian invaders and steeled herself for new and more vigorous assaults expected by land, sea and air.

This ghost-like capital was deserted except for defenders and those necessary for vital service. Clouds and snowfall kept Russian bombers away and gave time to strengthen defenses and clear away the debris of last week's air bombardment.

As night fell without further air raids on Helsinki, a government spokesman announced that in the eastern sector north of Lake Ladoga the Finns had captured 1,500 Russian troops. He said no further details of the capture were available.

Soviet war planes were reported late tonight to have resumed their raiding activities with a bombing attack on Vipuuri (Viborg). At least 11 civilian casualties were reported.

Total civilian casualties in air raids in Finland up to Sunday night were announced as 85 dead and 481 wounded, with 65 of the dead killed in Helsinki, where 16 buildings were destroyed by bombs, 11 by fire and 233 damaged.

(In the north, reports reaching Kirkens, Norway, said 20,000 first-line, well-equipped Finnish troops

The Neediest Families:

Small Contributions Will Save 3 Homes

By Lucia Giddens

A mother and five children huddle in a dismal basement room without funds for food and fuel, until the father comes out of the hospital and can go back to work.

Will a young mother have to break up her home and give up her two children at Christmas, because she lacks $80 to hold the home together, until she gets a promised job in March?

"Able to work, eager to work, but jobless and over 50." That is the plight of a father who had always provided for his large family until loss of work, the threat of eviction and the scarcity of food have heaped up problems too great for him to carry without help.

These three emergencies loom up next on the list of the 50 Neediest Families who will be in suffering and despair at Christmas but for one fact. That is the fact that there must be many citizens in Washington who want the joy of giving where the need is most desperate.

Today the plight of three families is described here.

Family No. 6

If Mr. G. had not been so anxious about his family, his illness might not have been so serious today. For months after he should have stopped, he kept on working, trying to earn a livelihood for his wife and five children.

He, a World War veteran, held the same job for 11 years until illness forced him to drop out several months ago. He is now in Mount Alto Hospital with a serious gastro-intestinal condition.

As he kept losing more and more time from his work, Mrs. G. began pawning the family's belongings to get food. But

U. S. Lawyer's Wife Bound, Robbed in 16th Street Hotel

A 26-year-old expectant mother, wife of a Justice Department attorney, was choked, then bound and gagged by a dapper colored man who threatened to kill her if she did not submit to robbery yesterday in her room at the Roosevelt Hotel, 2101 Sixteenth street northwest.

The woman, Mrs. Jean J. Maclay, was packing to move to a new home in North Arlington, Va., when the robber knocked. When she opened the door he handed her an envelope from "Miss Brown," then forced his way into the room, she told police.

Seizing Mrs. Maclay by the throat, he started to choke her and knocked her head against the wall as she struggled. She told police he asked for money, threatening to shoot if she did not hand it over. She pointed to her purse, crying "Take the money!"

The intruder then tied her hands with her husband's pajamas and her feet with several ties and took two $5 bills from the pocketbook. He ransacked the room, and, failing to find anything else of value, he gagged Mrs. Maclay and left, saying:

"I'll have someone let you loose."

A short while later a woman called the telephone operator at the hotel and told her to send someone to Mrs. Maclay's eighth-floor room. By that time, however, Mrs. Maclay had worked herself loose and had called police.

The man, whom she described as "about 30 years old, light skin, short, neatly dressed, with a small waxed mustache," had disappeared. Police last night were questioning suspects.

Nazis Make Formal Protest On Embassy Aide's Black Eye

German embassy authorities last night branded as "an issue between two governments" the alley argument between a Washington automobile mechanic and the Nazi air attache on Armistice Day.

The affair, in which Peter Riedel, famed German flier, came out second-best against Frank Werner, 128-pound mechanic, has involved the United States and German, in an "incident," according to Dr. Karl Resenberg, first secretary of the embassy.

"We do not consider the affair a personal controversy between Riedel and Werner," said Dr. Resenberg, "but rather an issue between two governments."

He said a formal protest had been made to the State Department and that this Government was expected to take "appropriate action."

Riedel claimed he was assaulted by Werner in an alley back of the Werner home at 3303 Tenth street northeast. Werner claimed Riedel parked his car in a flower bed and refused to move it.

According to Werner, the German ace struck the first blow. But according to a source close to Riedel (he is under orders not to comment), the offensive was taken by Werner. Riedel is further [illegible] to have told his superiors, "I never struck a blow."

At any rate, both men were scheduled to appeal yesterday at Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindleberger's office in Police Court building. Werner, his wife and two daughters were there at the appointed time—11 a. m. Riedel

U. S. Can Check War Price Rise, Experts Aver

Lubin, Thorp Say Large Inventories Should Act as Brake

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Skyrocketing prices — which plagued the Nation in the last war —can at least be checked in the present conflict, two top-flight New Deal economists indicated at a Monopoly Committee hearing yesterday.

Both Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, and Willard L. Thorp, special assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, agreed on that.

However, Lubin sounded a clear warning that the price rises that have already begun may continue, with a consequent jump in the cost of living and a demand for increased wages. In such an event, Lubin predicted, "out of it all will come the same serious economic repercussions that we witnessed 20 years ago."

Conditions Are Different

Thorp told the committee that the Department of Commerce was "starting out" to collect data on inventories.

He asserted that current conditions vary so widely from those at the outset of the World War that the price rise that took place then will not necessarily occur now.

The recent spurt in industrial activity sprang from speculation and also the desire for larger inventories "as a kind of war risk insurance," he declared. Few industries except steel are producing near capacity, he said, and there is little likelihood of a general demand for plant expansion in view of unemployment, "huge stocks" of agricultural raw materials, "considerable" unused plant capacity, and "fairly large inventories."

Asserting that a rapid price rise is likely to occur when industrial production reaches full capacity, Thorp predicted that at the present time increased demand can go "some distance" before it is "siphoned off" by rising prices.

Thorp declared that increased union membership since World War days meant that "any price movement will be more quickly translated into wage adjustments than before—(and) this may tend to hold down the level of profits, which were so important a factor in World War expansion."

British Buy From Empire

Also militating against an undue American price rise is the fact that Great Britain is buying as much as possible from the Empire—40 per cent of her imports now as compared with 20 per cent in 1914, Thorp testified. Furthermore, he said, the British are attempting to substitute taxation for borrowing—"a most important factor, particularly when combined with laws against price increases."

The committee, presided over by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, was told by Lubin that "if the past is any forecast of the future and if the present European war should unfortunately be prolonged, the United States will be faced with a marked rise in the prices of many important commodities and a subsequent period of painful economic readjustment." He asserted that rises already had occurred in drugs and medicines, burlap, zinc, grains, wool, wheat and cotton.

But Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, a member of the committee, asked Lubin: "Is there a better opportunity to put the brakes on prices this time than there was in the last war?"

"Very definitely," the witness replied.

Crowley, FDIC Chairman, Takes Job With Utility

By the Associated Press

Chairman Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said yesterday he would accept the position of chairman of the board of the Standard Gas & Electric Co., but would remain with the FDIC several months to clean up several problems.

Crowley discussed his plans with reporters after talking with President Roosevelt about "the whole banking situation."

The problems which must be ironed out before his departure, Crowley said, pertain to individual banks.

Standard Gas & Electric is a billion-dollar utility holding company which includes systems in 20 States and Mexico.

U. S. to Protest Blockade of Nazi Exports

Hull Undecided Whether to Take A Strong Stand

By Walter Fitzmaurice

The Administration, official quarters disclosed last night, has decided formally to protest the British-French blockade of German exports as an infringement upon American neutral rights.

Undetermined as yet by Secretary of State Hull and his advisers, these quarters said, is whether to make the protest "strong or mild." They said the question of retaliation by the United States has not come up.

A British order in council and a French decree, providing for seizure from neutral vessels of "all goods of German origin or ownership," became effective yesterday in asserted reprisal for Germany's sowing of the English channel with "wild" mines.

Opportunity for U. S.

Department of Commerce trade experts said the blockade presents American industry an opportunity to capture Germany's lucrative Latin-American export markets. The Reich last year supplied 17.1 per cent of all Latin-American imports, representing a value of $238,170,000.

Britain, they warned, however, will contest an American trade offensive "every inch of the way." They said Britain's war economy entails a speed-up of export industries to earn foreign exchange for the purchase of raw materials and aircraft to wage the conflict.

Principal German sales to the southern republics were coal, iron and steel products, machinery, automobiles, chemicals, textiles, paper and paper pulp, precision instruments and optical goods. Britain, officials said, can compete with the United States in supplying all but the last three.

U. S. Trade Gaining

New York, Dec. 4 (INS).—Indications that a substantial portion of Germany's former export trade with South America already has fallen into American hands was seen by shipping experts here today.

Officials of the Grace Line revealed that there has been an appreciable increase in South American freight shipments recently—so much so that the company has chartered additional freighters to handle the traffic.

The United Fruit Line, Panama Pacific Lines, American Republics Line, and others have experienced a similar spurt in South American trade.

Pepco Head To Advise on Power Needs

Alfred G. Neal, acting president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and J. H. Ferry, vice president and chief engineer, will represent the local company at opening today of a series of conferences between the National Power Policy Committee and utility firms on the question of an adequate power supply.

An effort will be made to arrive at a "meeting of minds" as to what power supply is necessary to meet the needs of national defense and a full peacetime business recovery.

The meetings, which will continue through December 22, were called by Interior Secretary Ickes as chairman of the National Power Policy Committee. Ickes invited 50 operating power companies to participate.

The meeting today will concern itiself with the Washington-Baltimore area. Besides Pepco, the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. ano the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co., both of Baltimore, have been invited to send representatives.

Mrs. Roosevelt Denies Youth Unit Duped Her

Says She Investigated Group and Found No Communist Connection

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday answered assertions she had been "duped" into supporting the American Youth Congress by saying she had investigated the organization and found no evidence of "outside control."

Witnesses before the Dies committee have said it is dominated by Communists.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she can believe in the congress because:

She knows many young people working in the organization and has confidence in them.

She has read all literature put out by the Youth Congress and all resolutions passed since its first meeting, and has found nothing to be censured in them (although I haven't always agreed with them," she added).

She has followed in detail the organization's program, which has been carried out under a very limited budget.

She has gone over all financial statements of the congress, has made a detailed inquiry into where its money comes from and where it goes, and has discovered no outside "influence" or support in its connection.

"What else can one do to safeguard oneself from being duped?" asked the First Lady.

As to whether the Dies Committee should continue to function after January, Mrs. Roosevelt would not say. That, she added, is something that does not concern her.

Touching on the Finland-Russia situation, Mrs. Roosevelt termed it "very sad," but declined to talk about it further.

The Youth Congress charged last night that procedure of the Dies Committee "is undermining the young people's faith in our American form of government" and urged that the group "be discontinued immediately."

In a resolution adopted at a meeting here, the organization said the committee's conduct "tends to discredit the work of all other Congressional committees and weaken public confidence in the functioning of democracy."

Generals Urge U.S. to Pay for Rising Militia

Expansion Is Wholly For National Defense, Woodring Is Told

By John G. Norris.

A delegation of National Guard generals called on Secretary of War Woodring yesterday and asked that the Federal Government bear the full cost of the recent emergency expansion of the State forces and any further enlargement required for war needs.

Leaders of the group, composed of the executive and legislative committees of the National Guard Association, said that while the present dual support basis has worked satisfactorily, recent increases in the Guard are based on National rather than State needs.

"The States now provide the armories, garages and other buildings and pay for their maintenance and upkeep," said Brig Gen. Walter D. Delamater, president of the association.

Increase for Defense

"They are willing to continue to do so. But the present large increases in men, vehicles and equipment are not required for the preservation of local civil order. The increase is entirely for National defense reasons. We feel the cost of providing and keeping up the new buildings required should not fall on the States."

Secretary Woodring withheld comment on the proposal, which officials felt would require Congressional action.

Asks Shore Facilities

Meanwhile, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison received a recommendation that additional shore facilities be provided to supply the needs of the fleet.

Rear Admiral Ray Spear, Paymaster General of the Navy, said in his annual report that modern freight piers were required at naval bases and that additional storage facilities were urgently needed, especially on the West Coast.

Admiral Spear reported that the Walsh-Healey act, governing Federal contracts, had reduced the number of bidders for Navy business from an average of about seven and one-half bids to six on each contract.

The Guard leaders who called on Secretary Woodring included: Maj. Gen. Albert Blanding, chief of the National Guard Bureau; Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander and adjutant general of Maryland; Maj. Gen. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, Maj. Gen. Clifford Powell, Brig. Gen. Stephen Barlow and Brig. Gen. Chamber Balks At Idea of New Defense Taxes

Organized business, represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, threw cold water yesterday upon the idea broached by President Roosevelt of levying special taxes to finance emergency defense outlays.

Asserting that new taxes, for defense or other purposes, were not the answer to fiscal problems, the chamber suggested creation of a central committee to survey the budget situation soon after the President sent his estimates to Congress.

At the same time Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, member of the House Appropriations Committee, conceded the coming Presidential campaign would make it difficult to cut spending.

11 Workmen Hurt As Pit Caves In On WPA Project

Detroit, Dec. 4 (AP).—Eleven men were injured today when a pit caved in on a WPA concrete mixing project on Detroit's East Side. One, a colored man, suffered serious injuries.

Twenty-five men were at work. Those not buried rescued their fellow workers. Later police and firemen aided. The injured were taken to two hospitals.

At the time of the cave-in most of the men were enlarging the pit to accommodate larger trucks.

Files Denied Senate Probe In California

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Dec. 4.—Sheriffs and district attorneys of two San Joaquin Valley counties withheld records from the Senate Civil Liberties Committee today at a preliminary investigation of the Associated Farmers.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said it was "the first instance I have ever heard of where a public official refused to produce records" for the committee.

All four officials—from Fresno and Madera counties—refused on the grounds "public interest would suffer." They were ordered to produce all pertinent records when formal hearings get underway in San Francisco December 13.

Senator Thomas said the 30 officials appearing today with records of counties, corporations and Associated Farmers units were "on the whole very cooperative." He attributed refusals to "misunderstandings."

Statements from the Governors of California, Oregon and Arizona will be presented Wednesday.

"The subpoena is very explicit about what we want," Thomas told one official. "You may comply any way you wish to do but it must be done by the thirteenth of the month."

4 Movie Operators Face Blue Law Trial

Danville, Va., Dec. 4 (AP).—Sunday movie shows resulted in the serving of warants on four Danville theater managers, who were charged with violating the State's Sunday observance law and ordered to appear in police court December 7.

One of the men, Fleet Robinson, was acquitted recently by a five-man jury on a similar charge resulting from a paid-admission show last October. The other three managers were Charles L. Abercrombie, Ben F. Smart and Clyde Wootoon, jr.

56 Parking Tickets Fixed, Increase of 9

Two Policemen, Deputy U. S. Marshal Among Fortunate

Tickets were "adjusted" for 56 motorists, including 2 policemen and a deputy U. S. marshal, in the week ended Saturday, police announced yesterday. The 41 warnings and 15 outright cancellations represented an increase of 9 over the number fixed the previous week.

Detective Sergt. James E. Ennis, charged with overtime parking, got off with a warning for the officially stated reason: "Out on a case." Policeman Edwin S. Grayson, of the Public Relations Squad, had a ticket for parking next to a loading zone struck from the records because he was "checking on report of a missing person." Deputy Marshal Thomas East also escaped with a warning on a parking violation.

Five employes of embassies, including the British, German, French and Japanese, were canceled because of diplomatic immunity. Four tickets were issued for parking violations, the fifth for disobeying an officer's signal.

Reasons for 56 cancellations and warnings ranged from "stopped momentarily to make large bank deposit," to "doctor on emergency call" and the much-used "stranger in the city."

Names of persons for whom tickets were "fixed" and the reason for the cancellation or warning follow:

At the Traffic Division, report signed by Capt. Milton D. Smith:

Clarissa M. Ludlim, of Chevy Chase, Md., parked overtime, previous record clear for 25 years; John J. King, 5616 Fourth street northwest, parked too close to corner, health inspector on official business; L. Knopfer, of Pennsylvania, parked overtime, visitor; Dr. Juan A. del Resato, Chevy Chase, Md., parked overtime, doctor on professional errand; William O. Lanham, Bradbury Heights, Md., parked too close to corner, investigation disclosed technical case; Jishwa L. Sprinkle, 924 Madison street northwest, parked between 8 and 6 p. m., no previous record; James E. Ennis, 2014 Taylor street northwest, parked overtime, detective sergeant out on case; Edwin S. Grayson, 1240 Neal street northeast, parked loading zone, police officer in house checking on missing person.

At Second Precinct Station, record signed by Acting Commander Paul L. Barnes: Oral E. Garrison, 1725 New Hampshire avenue northwest, parked in driveway entrance, car was pushed there; Kathryn A. Hillyard, 1116 Vermont avenue northwest, parked overtime, car disabled; Allen M. Wilkins, 24½ Q street northwest, no parking any time, previous good record; Lester G. Wilson, Chevy Chase, Md., parked overtime, previous good record; Florence Quinn, Bethesda, Md., parked overtime, car disabled; Ilse Bahnemann, 1439 Massachusetts avenue northwest, parked overtime, employed at German Embassy—immune to arrest.

Third Precinct Record

At Third Precinct, record signed by Capt. John E. Bowers: John J. Long, 3453 Holmead place northwest, parked 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., diplomatic immunity (chauffeur Japanese Embassy); Herbert H. Schoenfeld, 4332 Hawthorne street northwest, parked in public space, doctor on emergency call; Samuel Cafritz, 3000 Porter street northwest, parked 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., mother dying in hospital; Garner B. Duff, Clearfield, Pa., parked forbidden area, stranger; William E. Larkin, 1816 Jefferson place northwest, parked public space, did not know it—officer concurred; William K. Baker, 1706 Monroe street northwest, parked 8 to 9:30 a. m., pharmacist filling prescription; Harvey D. Fearnow, 31 Q street northwest, parked 4 to 6 p. m., stopped momentarily—officer concurred; John J. Hefferman, 917 Tenth street northeast, parked abreast, stopped momentarily to deposit money in bank; Nolanda Tanner, Glen Echo Heights, Md., obstructing fire hydrant, car was pushed; Ralph W. Dorius, 1709 New Hampshire avenue northwest, disobeying official signal, diplomatic immunity.

National Symphony Orchestra Starts Northern Tour, First of Four This Winter

By John Chabot Smith
Post Staff Writer

Aboard the "Symphony Special," Dec. 4.—Eighty-five sleepy individuals with odd-shaped luggage paraded through the empty Union Station at 6 a. m. today and clambered aboard this three-car railroad train without benefit of leave-takings.

The National Symphony Orchestra, Washington's own contribution to American music, was off to show a part of the Nation what it means by its name. Tonight the first concert on an 11-day tour of New York and New England cities will be given at Syracuse, N. Y.

The musicians put their trumpets in the luggage racks and cellos in the empty seats, took their chairs apart to make them into beds and composed themselves to resume their interrupted sleep. As the cold, cheerless dawn came up over Baltimore, Manager C. Cappel explained what the trip is all about.

The National Symphony Orchestra, he said, aims to be truly national and not confine its playing to Washington audiences. Hence its frequent tours, four this year, to all cities in reach, from Massachusetts to Ohio and Florida. This year it is playing more than 50 concerts outside Washington, reaching more cities thany any other orchestra.

The National Symphony is a young and developing orchestra, he said, and touring gives experience that couldn't be gained at home. Only 35 concerts are scheduled for Washington, including the 13 for children. That is all Washington audiences want, but it is not as much as the musicians want.

And Manager Cappel knows how to make touring pay, which is virtually unique among orchestras. It's done by organization and planning. All the concerts on this tour are to be played in cities fairly close together—Syracuse, Albany, N. Y.; Springfield, Mass., and Kingston, N. Y., bound the area covered.

The first move today is the longest. Eleven hours through mountains, in two coaches and a baggage car that are pulled in turn by engines of the Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Central New Jersey, and Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroads, and will eventually roll into Syracuse on the tail of the luxurious Lackawanna Limited.

Manager Cappel's scouts have investigated each city to be visited, booked rooms at hotels within walking distance of railroad stations, arranged for buses to make the short hauls. Each member of the orchestra has a mimeographed sheet, pocket edition of the old-fashioned stage-door "call board," telling him when to come and go and where to meet for each move. The little army is mobilized with military smoothness.

One man is lacking on the train, Dr. Hans Kindler, the conductor. He travels apart and lodges in different hotels from the players, for if he stayed with them the tour would become one long rehearsal between concerts. There is never a time when someone isn't practicing, and if Dr. Kindler is within earshot he is asked too often for help.

Even without the conductor the baggage car has sounded like the hall of a music conservatory most of the day. A solitary trombonist began the day, with a muffler round his neck to keep off the draught, facing the engine and trying to drown out its whistle. Sharp curves and occasional jerks threw him off balance and periled his front teeth, but there wasn't anything to do about it. Playing the trombone is like playing football, he explained; if you don't exercise a little every day you get soft, you can't keep your diaphragm in condition.

A couple of flutists joined him, to keep their tongues and lips limber, and did a swing descant to his pompous scales. The flutists chose a safe perch among the boxes carrying drums, double basses, the harp, music and that curse of orchestral State managers, folding stands.

Setting-up exercises over and their physical fitness assured, the wind players joined the strings in poker games that sprang to life as the need for sleep was filled.

After leaving Syracuse the orchestra will play at Cornell University, at Ithaca, Elmira, Colgate University, at Mailton; Troy, N. Y.; Springfield and Fall River, Mass.; Hartford, Conn., and Kingston and Binghamton, N. Y.

'Get Maverick' Talk Revealed By Witness

Judge Directs Acquittal Of Ex-Representative On 2 Counts; 4 Remain

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 4.—Defense counsel for Mayor Maury Maverick presented evidence today that the poll tax fraud charge on which the former national Representative is on trial was an effort to get him "out of circulation."

Earlier in the day District Judge Bryce Ferguson denied a defense motion for an instructed verdict of acquittal on all counts. He did, however, instruct for acquittal on two counts.

Four counts left standing allege that Maverick conspired with others last January to pay the poll tax of R. L. O'Brien, member of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Those on which he was acquitted accused him of directly paying O'Brien's tax.

A poll tax receipt is a voting requirement in Texas.

First defense witness was Howard F. Le Baron, of Fort Worth, field examiner for the National Labor Relations Board. He told of a conversation in September with Maxwell Burket, an attorney and State witness, in which Burket assertedly said that District Attorney John R. Shook told him "the best way to get Maverick out of circulation was on a poll tax fraud charge."

Le Baron quoted Burket as saying that he believed Shook could pick the kind of grand jury which would indict Maverick and adding that the indictment might include the word "conspiracy" which would sound bad to the public.

Burket expressed the opinion Maverick had "double-crossed him" since becoming mayor, the witness testified.

25 More WPA Rioters Convicted Of Conspiracy

Mineapolis, Dec. 4 (AP).—Twenty-five persons, charged with conspiracy in the Minneapolis WPA strike riots last July, were convicted by a Federal court jury today. The defendants were accused of molesting Federal relief clients in alleged picketing at a sewing project.

Those involved in today's verdict were among 90 charged with conspiracy in a single indictment.

Judge M. M. Joyce deferred sentence pending a report by the probation officer.

The trial was the third of a series in which eventually some 160 defendants will be prosecuted. In two earlier trials, eight persons were convinced of conspiracy charges.

Russia Held Likely to Quit League

Argentina Demands Expulsion of Soviets For 'Aggression'

By the United Press

Geneva, Dec. 4.—League of Nations delegates gathering today for special sessions called Saturday and Monday for consideration of Finland's appeal for arbitration of the dispute with Russia were confident Russia's withdrawal was imminent.

Russia's announcement late tonight of her refusal to attend either of the sessions was believed to be merely the forerunner of formal notification of withdrawal.

Furthermore, the action of Argentina and other South American countries in pressing for expulsion of Russia was considered sufficient to cause withdrawal, even if Russia had not previously considered it.

Expulsion Is Demanded

Geneva, Dec. 4 (AP).—With the backing of other South American countries, Argentina today demanded immediate expulsion of Russia from the League of Nations for her "aggression" against Finland.

The demand received widespread approval among the delegations at Geneva. Observers said it was expected to clarify quickly whether the Allies would wink at Soviet actions.

The sharply worded demand was dispatched by Argentine's foreign minister, Jose Maria Cantilo. A similar note was sent by Uruguay, and other South American League members were said to be preparing their demands.

Before this action, Britain and France were reported uncertain whether to back Finland's protest. They were said to fear it might throw the Soviet into the arms of Germany.

There is no precedent for such a step as demanded by Argentina and no power ever has been ousted.

The Russian delegate, Jakob Surits, who is ambassador to France, kept discreet silence. He almost rubbed shoulders with Finland's delegate, Rudolf Holsti during a brief afternoon meeting of a League committee, but neither spoke.

The committee adjourned before the embarrassing word "war" could be mentioned.

German Comment

Berlin, Dec. 4 (AP).—Convocation of the League of Nations Council and Assembly in response to Finland's appeal was seen tonight by the newspaper Fremdenblatt, of Hamburg, as an attempt to put Germany "on the carpet" before a world forum.

Westerners Hit U. S. Policies on Trade and Grazing

Denver, Colo., Dec. 4 (AP).—Western livestock and farm interests attacked the Government's reciprocal trade agreement negotiations, public land administration and restrictions on the sugar industry today at a hearing conducted by five members of an agricultural committee.

F. E. Mollin, secretary of the American National Livestock Association, accused Secretary Hull of "paying no attention whatever" to stockmen's protests against lowering import duties on beef and cattle by-products. Others attacked Western grazing restrictions.

Quota restrictions on domestic sugar production and Federal intervention in determining pay for field workers were criticized by William A. Carlson, Greeley, Colo.

Farmers and stockmen from five States—Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado—attended the session today.

Sligo Park Group Meets Tonight on Protested House

Continuing their fight against the building of a nine-bedroom house on Sligo parkway, Takoma Park, Md., the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association has called a meeting for tonight at 8 p. m. in Jesup Blair Community House Silver Spring, Md., to put the matter before a dozen other civic groups and all interested residents.

Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw was urged last night by Stewart Lashley, president of the association, to attend.

The citizens' association last week indorsed a petition opposing the house that is being built for the Rev. William Steele, retired missionary of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

1,500 Russian Troops Taken Near Lake, Finland Claims

Bombing Attack Reported; Defenders Stay in Helsinki

were standing off the Russian attack in the Arctic region of Petsamo. The reports said several thousand Soviet troops had landed in that area, but Finnish leaders declared their regiments in the far north would not be pushed back.)

English Attack Charged

Official quarters seemed mystified over a dispatch printed in Pravda, Communist official party newspaper in Moscow, which declared that in a heavy battle near Kronstadt, Russian naval ba , Red ships, planes and tr ps "routed the Finns and the English who dared to attack our shores."

The Helsinki government made no comment on the report.

In other theaters of the undeclared war, the Finns asserted their forces were holding their own.

As a new defense measure, the Helsinki government announced it was fortifying the strategic Aaland Islands which command the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia.

(A Swedish government spokesman said Sweden would have no objection to Finland fortifying the Aalands, pointing out that under the convention of 1920 Finland may take any steps necessary to defend the islands if her neutrality is threatened.

(Russia posed vigorous objections before the League of Nations last June when Sweden and Finland proposed jointly to fortify the islands.)

A government spokesman said the Russian invasion had created a new situation in regard to the islands, which are about 30 miles wide and lie some 50 miles from the Finnish west coast and 50 miles off the eastern coast of Sweden. Under Czarist Russia they were a part of Finland.

"The Aaland Islands are one of our most vulnerable points," said a government spokesman. "If they should fall into the hands of another power it would close the Gulf of Bothnia and practically isolate Finland from the rest of the world."

The Aaland Islands declared their independence in 1917. Sweden and Finland, under League of Nations supervision, guaranteed sovereignty.

That was why Sweden and Finland had to ask permission of the League last spring when they desired to fortify the islands.

Lines Touch Border

Kirkenes, Norway, Dec. 4 (AP).—Reports reaching this border town said the main Finnish front line was from Petsamo southward, a little east of the so-called "Arctic highway," connecting this Far North country with southern Finland. It was said there were no Russians west of the highway.

There are other Finnish lines 30 miles to the west, close to the Norwegian border and touching Salmijaervi, border town 20 miles south of Kirkenes.

Russian prisoners taken by the Finns were said to be exhausted, having gone without food for three days prior to their capture.

I. J. Simcox, American manager for the International Nickel Co. of Canada in the Salmijaervi area, arrived here with a report 3,000 Russian soldiers had landed at various points on Petsamo Fjord.

After Simcox reached here smoke was sighted over the Nickel Co.'s properties at Salmijaervi and it was believed the nickel works were aflame. Refugees said the fires were old houses burning along the road between the mines and Salmijaervi, burned by the Finns "for strategical reasons."

Simcox reported the civilian population of Salmijaervi had been removed.

Raiders Reported Wrecked

Stockholm, Dec. 4 (AP).—A Russian squadron on a bombing flight over Finland, North of Lake Ladoga, was reported to have lost its way in a snowstorm and crashed into treetops. Several planes were wrecked.

The report added that 25 of 50 New Italian fighting planes, recently delivered to Finland, were ready for action.

British Leave Helsinki

Copyright by New York Times.

Copenhagen, Dec. 4.—Politiken's correspondent reports that late Sunday evening the British vice consul in Helsinki received information so alarming he did not dare let the few remaining British citizens stay in the town.

The consul, failing to obtain telephone connection, went to all British subjects personally to awaken them. A few hours later the colony had left Helsinki.

His information, it is said, was in conection with rumor of an inpending gas attack on Helsinki.

Train Amputates Legs of Youth in Washington Grove

John Day, 19, of Redland, Md., lost both legs below the knee yesterday when he was run over by a freight train at Washington Grove, Md.

He told Montgomery County Hospital officials the train started suddenly as he was crossing the tracks. Walter F. Rinehart, station agent, told police the train had just got underway when he saw Day on the track. He flagged the train to a stop and Day rolled off, he added.

The injured youth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Day, of Redland, police said.

Italians March In Rome, Milan To Cheer Finns

Troops Bar Route to Soviet Embassy After Police Disperse Crowd

By the Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 4.—Mounting Italian disapproval of the Soviet invasion of Finland was shown today by vigorous student demonstrations in Rome and Milan.

A thousand students paraded the streets of Milan for an hour behind Italian and Finnish flags.

"Viva Finlandia," they shouted, urging resistance to the Soviet attack.

The paraders massed before the Finnish consulate, where they cheered for several minutes and then proceeded to a square where they concluded the demonstration by shouting further pro-Finnish and anti-Russian slogans.

The Rome demonstration by 1,000 students was the second anti-Soviet demonstration here within three days.

Police dispersed the crowd before the Finnish legation after students had rushed upstairs to the apartments of the minister, Eero Jarnefelt, and took him to the balcony three times to bow and thank them in the Finnish language.

Cries of "Long Live Finland!" and "Down With Russia, Stalin and Bolshevism!" echoed as the students moved off toward the Soviet Embassy, but troops prevented them from reaching it.

A group of several hundred students, marching past the United States Embassy toward the Russian, applauded Consul General Graham Kemper and members of his staff who appeared on balconies.

Italians Urge Sanctions

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Dec. 4.—A strong hint that Italy would like to see the League of Nations impose sanctions on Russia as it did on Italy in the Ethiopian war is contained in Virginio Gayda's editorial in today's Giornale d'Italia.

"The Soviet invasion was unprovoked," writes Gayda. "According to the League covenants Finland has the right to demand and expect sanctions against Russia. The slave state of Ethiopia did not have that right, for it was guilty of 30 years' aggression against Italy . . . It will be interesting to see in Finland's clear case what are the intentions and defensive actions of those great powers who remembered the covenants and applied sanctions with inexorable and joyful firmness against Italy . . ."

Grandi Takes Two Posts

Rumania 'Warned' Of Soviet Thrust

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Bucharest, Dec. 4.—It was understood here tonight that British diplomatic circles warned the Rumanian government of an imminent invasion by Soviet troops.

This information was not confirmed, however, and Rumanian statesmen apparently believed there is no immediate danger as the Russians continue fighting the Finns.

There is a tendency in Rumanian circles to think that Britain and France weave alarming reports with the object of persuading the Rumanian government to permit the landing of Allied troops in the Balkans.

A.F.L. Asks Recall Of Soviet Envoy

present only a remote possibility of this country's calling home its Ambassador from Russia and giving the Russian envoy his papers.

Woll, in his capacity as president of the League for Human Rights, Freedom and Democracy, an organization sponsored by high officials of the A. F. L., issued a statement saying:

"Those who have observed with their eyes open have always believed that communism would sooner or later reveal its insatiable appetite for world domination. We see now the first armed step in this program. Unless Russia can be checked, Finland will be the first morsel to be seized."

He said further:

"I am sure we would not invite Stalin to come among us. We should send home his representative (the Russian Ambassador) with the whole network of Soviet diplomatic and consular propagandists. America has nothing in common with a government that can so disregard all decent human standards."

The league is sponsored by officials of the A. F. L.

Broken Pledge Charged

Russia's invasion of Finland was given less consideration in Senator Vandenberg's statement than Russia's alleged failure to keep her pledge that she would not assist subversive activities here.

He charged there was ample evidence to show the Soviet government was directing activities of American Communists and had broken its promise, made when it obtained recognition from President Roosevelt in 1933, that it would not maintain relations with organizations which threatened to injure the "tranquility, prosperity, order or security" of this country.

He cited testimony before the Dies committee that American Communists acted under orders from Moscow, and added:

"If this be true—and it is the duty of our Government to determine the facts—we should not only recall our Ambassador; we should recall our recognition and revert to the status preceding 1933." . . .

Asks Presidential Inquiry

"I ask, therefore, for a formal official inquiry by the President, who is in sole charge of these relationships and who personally negotiated the recognition of Russia in the first instance, to determine whether the pledges of November 16, 1933, in the Roosevelt-Litvinoff correspondence have not been reduced to a travesty, and to determine whether American recognition of Soviet Russia should not be permanently withdrawn so that we no longer tactitly condone sinister purposes operating through American pawns to destroy constitutional America."

He declared the break he called for would also "reflect our deep moral indignation over the brutal rape of Finland following the partition of Poland."

Russia Rejects Finland's Bid for Peace

nol's communication, he said, was "incompatible with requirements for due respect for the Soviet Union."

After enumerating Russia's position on the Finnish petition, Molotoff concluded:

"If notwithstanding the above considerations, the league council and assembly were still convened to consider Rudolf Holsti's (Finnish representative at Geneva) application, the Soviet government would not deem it possible to take part in these assemblies."

Joined League in 1934

Russia entered the League in 1934 when Maxim Litvinoff was the commissar of foreign affairs. He used the league as a forum for exposition of his policy of collective security.

After his resignation May 3, negotiations with Britain and France for an alliance stalled, and a series of accords was concluded with Germany.

The communique of the Leningrad military area said:

"On December 4, in the direction of Murmansk, Soviet troops pursuing a group of defeated Finnish troops near Petsamo and advanced 25 kilometers south of Petsamo. In Petsamo, Soviet warships are clearing the mines laid by Finns.

Other Progress Claimed

"In the Uhtua, Repola and Porosozero sectors (about 450 miles north of Lake Ladoga) Soviet troops advanced from 45 to 50 kilometers.

"In view of unfavorable weather no air action took place."

The Soviet press published today long explanations of the Red Army's operations in Finland, denying Russia intended to make Finland "a dependent country" and that she "menaces northern countries."

Great Britain, France and the United States were criticized for their attitudes.

The Soviet press emphasized a charge that land mines, which it said had been laid on the Karelian isthmus by Finns, were of British manufacture.

Pravda denied charges ascribed to "instigators of war" that "the Red Army violates the neutrality of the northern countries, that it marches into Finland as an aggressor and as a conqueror and that it unleashes war in northeastern Europe and menaces the northern countries," adding:

"The Red Army marches into Finland not as an aggressor and not as a conqueror, but as a liberator of the Finnish people . . ."

British May Expose Soviets

London, Dec. 4.—The inside story of why Russia signed a nonaggression treaty with Germany, instead of becoming an ally of the western democracies may be given to the world by the British soon, in the form of a white paper or in a statement to Parliament, it was hinted tonight.

It is known England is considering a protest with France against the invasion of Finland.

The foreign office has consistently refused to disclose the reasons behind the collapse of Anglo-French dickering with the Kremlin, asserting neutral countries were involved. Unofficial sources indicate the real reason was their unwillingness to trade the integrity of Finland and the Baltic States.

Soviet Cruiser Damaged

Moscow (Tuesday), Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Russia's new 8,500-ton cruiser Kirov has "received its baptism under fire," the official Communist Party organ Pravda reported today. It was understood the warship had been damaged by shellfire.

The Kirov, it was understood, has been taken into Tallinn for repairs.

(Stockholm and German wireless reports Sunday said the Kirov, one of Russia's four cruisers of the 8,500-ton class, had been towed into Tallinn by two tugs after being crippled in a bombardment of Finland's Hango fortress.)

Japan Renews Efforts for U. S. Accord

Tentative Program Is Reported Given Grew in Conference

By Hugh Byas.

Copyright by New York Times.

Tokyo, Dec. 4.—On the initiative of Japanese Foreign Minister Nomura, United States Ambassador Grew resumed this afternoon the discussion of Japanese-American relations begun November 4.

The negotiations have not reached definite developments. Both sides decided publicity at present would not help progress, but a source close to the Japanese government indicated a tentative Japanese formula had been presented for settlement of the main Japanese-American problems.

Hull Declines Comment

(Secretary Hull in Washington declined to comment on the Tokyo talk and said he had not yet heard from Ambassador Grew.)

Authoritaitve quarters expressed the opinion that the Japanese were prepared to offer concrete examples of better treatment of American interests in China.

As a month had elapsed since Nomura's first talk with Grew, the latter's representations have been discussed by all Japanese circles whose understanding is essential to effective agreements. This long period has allowed full exchanges between the government in Tokyo and the military authorities in China.

Nomura and the rest of the cabinet are sincerely anxious to restore friendly Japanese-American relations, but much work must be done before the foundation is laid.

The Japanese press still takes the view that what is needed is correction of the Americans' mistaken views, and Asahi points out that will be slow work.

British Negotiations Proceed

Hochi said Nomura told Grew that western countries' activities in China would be welcomed only along economic and cultural lines and that political activities on the basis of protection rights and interests must be discarded.

Parallel negotiations with Britain also are proceeding. On Saturday the British Ambassador saw Masayuki Tani, vice foreign minister, regarding the dispute over Chinese silver deposits in the British concession at Tientsin.

Japanese Are Anti-Soviet

Copyright by New York Times.

Tokyo, Dec. 4.—Right wing extremists who are urging Japan to join the Moscow-Berlin entente, are suffering a sharp setback in public opinion over the Soviet actions in Finland.

Today's Nichi Nichi said Russia will become the "world's most hated nation, as in the early years of the Soviet revolution."

A nonaggresion pact is not on the program for the settlement of Japanese-Soviet differences, Yakachiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, said.

All Not Quiet on Riedel-Warner Front

failed to appear.

Explaining the Nazi attache's absence, Dr. Ressenberg said:

"It is not customary in diplomatic circles for the representative of a foreign country to appear in court."

Werner and his family waited nearly two hours for Riedel to make his appearance and press the assault charges.

Kindleberger finally dismissed Werner when it appeared certain Riedel wouldn't show up.

"I don't know any more about this than you do," said Kindleberger as the Werner family filed out.

As far as could be learned from officials involved, Riedel never did receive notice of the hearing. The embassy had made a formal complaint to the State Department, which turned the case over to the Commissioners. The latter asked Superintendent of Police Brown to act, and he dispatched detectives to summon the Werners, apparently expecting the State Department to inform Riedel. But the State Department didn't inform Riedel either.

Riedel, who holds the altitude and distance records for gliders in this country, was visiting at the home of a friend, the Rev. Paul Schulte, famed German "flying priest," who lives next door to the Werners, when the "incident" occurred.

According to Riedel's friends, he refrained from striking Werner "because I was so much bigger." The German flier wanted to "drop the whole thing," his associates said, but was forced to make a routine report to the embassy.

A note to the State Department from Hans Thomsen, German counselor, followed.

500 Census Enumerator Jobs To Be Available Here in April

Places Expected to Be Congressional Plums; D. C. Chief Has Had Long Experience in Bureau; National Set-up Thrown Into High

By Alfred Friendly

The Census Bureau's ten-year patronage machine has shifted into high, with gears meshing as well as could be expected. Senators and Representatives already have been given their traditional booty. Local political organizations throughout the Nation are next line.

Here is the system's pattern and a few observations on how it has worked out so far:

The positions of managers—a few in eact State—have gone to candidates named by the Democratic Senators of that State or, if there are none, by the State Democratic committee. These candidates were trained in Washington in the past few weeks.A few nominations were thrown out at the start, others as the course developed, and still more as a result of examinations.

Those "flunked out" included the nominees of Senators Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, as well as the choice of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, whose discharge resulted in a public controversy.

D. C. Chief Nonpolitical

On the whole, census officials express themselves as well satisfied with their area managers and credit the Senators with wise nominations. About one-third of all area managers, however, are nonpolitical appointees, consisting of veteran members of the bureau's own staff.

In this latter category is the area manager for the District, G. R. Brown, a census employe of long experience. His assistant is Mrs. Katherine G. Parker, former WPA executive with an outstanding reputation.

Under the area managers are the supervisors for 528 districts, and an equal number of assistant district supervisors. These 1,056 jobs were the plums of members of Congress. The districts themselves correspond to Congressional districts, some of which, however, were split into two or more parts.

The district supervisors and assistants also must complete a course of schooling and pass an examination before being given the jobs. The classes began yesterday at 105 points throughout the country.

250 Candidates Rejected

Hard-boiled to a surprising degree, the bureau already has turned thumbs down on more than 250 candidates, on the grounds of lack of experience or qualifications. In these cases a form telegram was sent to the nominating Congressman, explaining that his candidate was unacceptable and asking him to name another man.

As in the cases of the area managers, the bureau is happy with its district men. Officials say Congressmen are more reasonable than they are reputed and have selected competent persons.

In election districts where the Congressman is a Republican, the Democratic Senators get the nomination for supervisor, in addition to those for the area managers. In such States as Maine or Vermont, with no Democratic representation in the Senate, the plum went to the State Democratic committee.

The district supervisors have the right to appoint their own enumerators, the biggest patronage plum of all, with 120,000 to 130,000 jobs for the entire country. Candidates for these jobs, however, will be generally persons recommended by local Democratic organizations and committees.

500 D. C. Jobs to Be Plums

The job situation in the District is somewhat unique, with no single Congressman or local committee to do the nominating of enumerators. The probalities are that every Senator and Congressman, therefore, viewing the District enumerators' jobs as a sort of additional patronage bonus, will recommend jobless constituents who find themselves in Washington.

The Census Bureau is by no means inviting Congressmen to suggest the enumerators for the District, but presumably will lend a sympathetic ear to any who do so. Washington's quota of enumerators is 500 for the population, housing and agriculture census, to begin April 1, 1940, and 22 for the business and manufacturers' survey, to begin shortly after the first of the year.

To Correct Constipation Don't Get It!

Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew!

Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Toledo Manager, Bricker Clash In Relief Crisis

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 4 (AP).—Ohio's Governor and Toledo's city manager clashed tonight over responsibility for the relief crisis confronting several Ohio cities.

Gov. Bricker contended the State "has done all in its power" and cities must help themselves. City Manager George N. Shoonmaker said the alternatives for cities were: Continue piling up deficiency bonds, or shut up shop.

Gov. Bricker has refused pleas of Toledo, Cleveland and other cities that he call the Legislature to cope with the food-for-the-needy problem. WPA officials moved today to ease the situation by opening up new jobs, but thousands of Ohioans still were in want.

Acute Housing Shortage Seen

Boston, Dec. 4 (AP).—Asserting that "America is facing the most acute housing shortage in its history," a spokesman for the United States Housing Authority today declared there was "no single enterprise which can contribute more toward business recovery and general prosperity" than public housing.

Speaking at a conference of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, Jacob Crane, Assistant USHA Administrator, said, "Millions of American families are living today in overcrowded, unsanitary or structurally defective houses."

Box-Office Champions Are Straws in the Wind

Key City Receipts Reflect Public's 'Best Bets;' Giants-Redskins Special at the Trans-Lux; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH THE DEADLINE for the selection of the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year" set for the end of this month in the Film Daily's eighteenth annual poll of the critics of the country, the feature pictures that win "money" championships at the box-office from month to month take on added interest, if not significance.

In September, it may or may not be recalled, the Motion Picture Herald's audit of key city box-office statements turned up eight of these champions, on the basis of the public's willingness to pay money to see them. Similar tabulations by the same trade journal for the month of October developed only five champions in the view of the mass pocketbook. Five is nearer the year's average number per month than September's extravagant eight.

BELL

The October champions, in the order of their listing, were "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Babes in Arms," "The Old Maid," "The Real Glory" and "The Women." All of these have beene seen by Washington picturegoers and viewed with favor, although I am not sure that all would have been declared "champions" on the restricted evidence of the local ticket wickets.

The distribution of the national public's championships among the major producing companies was spread over four studios, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer being the only one to score a double with "Babes in Arms" and "The Women." The other three fell, one each, to Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and United Artists.

Critical appraisal and cash-customer enthusiasm do not always run hand in hand. With its increasing perception of the manifold and complex considerations that enter into the determination of what is and what is not a "best picture," however, old John Q. Public provides a fairly accurate barometer of the producers' proportionately mounting ability to gauge amusement tastes in the mass.

If the monthly box-office champions all were "best pictures," there would be nearer 100 of them than 10. That's what makes this annual guessing game something a little tougher than punching a pin ten times through the back of the list of four-hundred-and-some titles.

This column already knows which it thinks was the best picture of the year. Those other nine are something else again.

Incidentally, some more of those champions might come to life in the December bookings at the Earle Theater. There is an apparently nice line-up for the remainder of the month on Thirteenth street. Following the current "Jamaica Inn," will come Frank Lloyd's presumably epic production of "Rulers of the Sea," setting forth in heroic style the conquest of the sea and its old windjammers by steam. Then, in succession, will come "Four Wives," the Warners' sequel to "Four Daughters;" the same company's "The Dead End Kids on Dress Parade," in which the youthful hoodlums go to military school, and "The Amazing Mr. Williams." This last is a Columbia release, costarring Melvyn Douglas, a recent Washington visitor, and Joan Blondell. "Rulers of the Sea," is a Paramount picture, starring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Will Fyffe and Margaret Lockwood.

And while we are on the general topic of "what to see and where to go," it should be a matter of more than ordinary concern that Roland Robbins, manager of the Trans-Lux Theater, is stepping out today with a "special" on his program that ought to settle the matter of whether Bo Russell kicked that field goal or whether he didn't.

This photographic record of what happened at the Polo Grounds, in New York, when the Redskins lost by an eyelash to the Giants in that Eastern championship pro football game, will take the form of a full, single-reel story of the game filmed by Twentieth Century-Fox. It will be shown in addition to a composite of all the newsreel shots made of the ripping and tearing. If you can't find out from all that, probably nobody will ever know.

Eddy Duchin, orchestra leader and wizard of the keyboard, will embark upon an acting career. Definitely deciding to do something about all the stage and screen offers he has turned down during the past few years, he recently enrolled as a student at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, in New York, where he is seriously studying voice, acting, diction and all-around histrionics. Mr. Duchin has been slightly deflected from his original path. He started out on a career of pills and prescriptions as a registered pharmacist, but couldn't seem to brew any effective antidote for the sting of the music bug.

And that reminds me. Miss Marguerite "Babe" Parker, a former familiar brunette figure in the box-office at the Metropolitan Theater, is anxious to increase the membership of the Washington chapter—if that is what it is called—of the Eddy Duchin Fan Club, a national organization, of which she is Southern representative. It seems that the club has a total enrollment of some 300 members, scattered over the country but principally concentrated in New York and Chicago. There are even several of the European countries represented in the membership. Washington, it appears, is lagging a little behind in the enthusiasm to which Miss Parker feels Mr. Duchin is entitled. Those interested may find out all about it by addressing her at 7476 Georgia avenue northwest, or calling Randolph 1876.

Unless you mind a reminder, the Little Theater's second annual International Cinema Festival opens tomorrow. The inaugural double-feature bill—they all will be double bills, changing twice a week on Wednesdays and Sundays—will be comprised of "Mayerling," costarring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, and "En Saga," inspired by a tone poem by the celebrated Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, now so much in the news. "En Saga" is being shown for the first time on a Washington screen.

We had something to say here a few days ago about Joe Cook's climb to fame from the old "amateur nights" in the Miner burlesque houses, in New York. Perhaps there is a potential Joe Cook struggling for recognition in the Capital Anyhow, Managing Director Charlie Olive, of the Atlas Theater—which, of course, is not a burlesque house—means to find out. To that end he is inaugurating a series of "amateur nights" at his Northeast temple of the arts this Friday night, at approximately 9 o'clock. Buddy Lewis, well-known mimic and master of ceremonies, will be in charge of the activities. Anyone over 18 years of age is eligible to compete and may register now at the Atlas for any kind of act he or she may choose to offer.

JAMES ROOSEVELT is bringing a lawsuit against "The Washington Merry-Go-Round" because of their story concerning his relations with A. P. Giannini, etc. . . . The Society of American Composers will sell its catalogue rights for broadcasting purposes directly to the radio companies, because A. S. C. A. P. refused to accept its members . . . Paul Whiteman, who starred in "The King of Jazz" many years ago, will return to the screen—in the new Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland movie, "Strike Up the Band."

WHEN OSCAR LEVANT and June Gale decided to be married they flew to Virginia with Charles Lederer, the best man, and an attorney—who was startled by Oscar's kidding question: "Confidentially, do you think I'm making a mistake?" . . . The men who performed the ceremony repeated the phrase: "Do you, etc., do you etc.," so many times that Oscar interrupted to ask him "Do YOU?" . . . Before the ceremony they discovered that they had forgotten to bring a wedding ring. Levant went to a nearby jewelry shop and found a ring priced at $15 . . . "That's too much." Levant stated and got the ring—for $1 less . . . And so they were married, and will be happy, we hope, forevermore.

AFTER THE premiere of Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo" a gray-haired man came backstage, walked into Paul Muni's dressing room and challenged: "I'll bet you don't know who I am" . . . "Of course I do," said Muni. "You're Richard Bennett—the greatest actor on the American stage" . . . "I was," Bennett returned, "until tonight."

THE PARACHUTE Jump, which received so much publicity at the World's Fair, will be erected at Palisades Park . . . The State Department received a cable from Berlin, reporting that the Nazis have revoked many of the war regulations regarding labor, because of sit-down strikes. They've shortened the working hours and are paying overtime.

"THANKS for all wires received from friends," wires Gene Fowler, who now is recovering from his auto accident. "The Grim Reaper suffered nervous breakdown and is now trying to explain to his superiors in next world why he failed. Sam Goldwyn suggested retakes, and Zanuck has offered me job as stunt man. My last words, when I thought I was dying, were 'Illusion in Java.'"

YIP HARBURG, the lyricist, told this story of his early days in radio, when, in 1930, he and Jay Gorney were signed to write a complete musical comedy for each broadcast of the Ever-ready Hour . . . The comedy star they used, Don Barclay, received $750 per broadcast. The sponsors decided that the price was too high and secured a comic, who was not as famous, for $600 . . . At the first rehearsal they were displeased with the new man and told Harburg: "We don't like this new comic you've found us. Get Barclay back" . . . "But this new man's good and he's signed already," Harburg protested . . . "Get Barclay." Yip was ordered, "and pay this man half-pay for rehearsal. Then fire him" . . . And so they fired Fred Allen.

CLIFTON WEBB appeared for the first rehearsal of the road company of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . In the opening scene one of the actors reads, from Time magazine, a story about the Woollcott character Webb will portray—"Sheridan Whiteside"—a story which describes him as "The Falstaffian Mr. Whiteside" . . . George S. Kaufman heard that line, stared at the slim, hollow-cheeked Webb and changed "Falstaffian" to "ean and Elegant."

LOU HOLTZ now is in Hollywood, doing radio appearances for Maxwell House Coffee and Kraft Cheese . . . An eager but not very affluent sponsor sent Holtz an offer for a 13-week program . . . "You must have misunderstood," Holtz wired in reply. "I'm working out here for coffee and cheese—not coffee-and-cake."

'White Steed' Is a Pungent CarrollComedy

Simple Irish Villagers People Week's Play At the National

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE WHITE STEED." Eddie Dowling presents the comedy in three acts and four scenes by Paul Vincent Carroll. Staged by Hugh Hunt; settings by Watson Barratt. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Canon Matt Lavelle .....Whitford Kane
Rosieanne .....Granis O'Malley
Father Shaughnessy .....Tom Bate
Phelim Fintry .....Ralph Cullinan
Nora Fintry .....Gertrude Flynn
Donnacaidh McGoilla Phadraig .....Wm. H. Malone

Brigid Brodigan .....Elizabeth Malone
Denis Dillon .....William Cragin
Inspector Toomey .....Thomas P. Dillon
Meg Magee .....Eleanor Laurence
Michael Shivers .....Patrick Henry

Once again Paul Vincent Carroll has chosen the simple people of a little Irish village as the symbols of his impatience with a literal and intolerant spiritual dogma and his admiration of men with free souls and simple faith.

In "The White Steed," presented for the first time in Washington on the stage of the National Theater last night as a subscription play of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society, the author of "Shadow and Substance" flays the rigid regimentation of thought and action under the lash of bigotry and finds inspiration in the courage of those who are willing to defy the specious infallibility of "big" little people.

The exposition of his faith in the fundamental rightness of man's heart, mind and human nature is accomplished through two channels. One is the violent and only occasionally bitter feud between Canon Matt Lavelle, the aging and paralytic counselor of his little flock, and Father Shaughnessy, the young priest, burning with the impetuous fires of a theoretical and ideological crusader; the other, the romantically modern utilization of the legend of Niam, who plucked Ossian up behind her on her white steed and carried him away to her Land of Eternal Youth. The two movements of the comedy-drama are inextricably interlaced and of equal importance in Mr. Carroll's presentation of his interesting, amusing and, at times, spiritedly dramatic case against the astigmatic tyranny of certain latter-day practices and tenets, as opposed to the saner workings of a sound humanitarianism that has weathered the storms of ages.

Two Warring Factions

The protagonists of the conflict of clerical points of view, of course, are Canon Lavelle and Father Shaughnessy; of the more romantic and inspirational qualities of the play, Nora Fintry, the clear-thinking daughter of a humble vegetable dealer, and Denis Dillon, the young schoolmaster, who is brave only when whiskey makes him so. In the background of the one movement are the members of Father Shaughnessy's vigilance committee—moral policemen of the community—and of the other the waterfront hotel keeper, Canon Lavelle's faithful housekeeper and the local police, who resent the vigilance committee's infringement upon their proper functions. It is not always easy to discern through the strife engendered between these two factions why "The White Steed" should be described as a comedy. In its indictment of certain aspects of our social scheme it is more often serious than comic or gay.

Although lacking the spiritual and poetic beauty of "Shadow and Substance," one nevertheless finds himself wishing from time to time that "The White Steed" might be played with a little more accent on its highlights and shadows and the subtleties of the characters that comprise its dramatis personae. In the role of Canon Matt Lavelle, the veteran Irish actor, Whitford Kane, contributes by far the soundest performance of any member of the cast. His portrayal of the mellow and pontifical shepherd is kindly, sharply amusing and altogether authentic. Tom Bate's Father Shaughnessy is a technically perfect drawing, but somehow lacking in the austere conviction it should possess.

Lesser Roles Ably Played

The rebellious roles of Nora and Denis, as played by Gertrude Flynn and William Cragin, again permit something of the elusive beauty Mr. Carroll has written into them, as well as a bit of the action's most vibrant drama, to escape them. A great deal of both, however, happily remains. Among the lesser players, Grania O'Malley, as Rosieanne, the Canon's tenderly assertive housekeeper; Ralph Cullinan, the Phelim Fintry; Farrell Pelly, as Patrick Hearty; Thomas P. Dillon, Inspector Toomey, head of the police, and Patrick Henry, as Michael Shivers, the unregenerate inn-keeper, do most for the integrity and believability of the three acts.

Perhaps it is that "The White Steed" is the sort of play that brings up incessant memories of the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin. It is not an Abbey Theater performance that is being given at the National this week. It was such last night, notwithstanding, as to elicit six curtain calls from a large and enthusiastic audience.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 4 (INS).—Jane Bryan's tragi role as the little Austrian dancer in "We Are Not Alone" will not be followed by another sad part. After the way the New York critics raved over her brilliant performance, it would not have been surprising if Warners had sought another strong emotional role for her. But when Jane gets back from New York, Hal Wallis is handing her the script of a simple little human interest romance, "Stuff of Heroes," in which she will co-star with Eddie Albert.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Many fans across the country have asked me about the romance between Jane and Eddie. These youngsters who have made two pictures together, "Brother Rat," and "Brother Rat and the Baby," are the best of friends, but their careers right now come first with both. "Stuff of Heroes" by Al Martin Ivan Goff is about a modest young advertising clerk who dreams about being a big shot, and finally does become a hero in the eyes of one girl.

Paramount comes up the "winnah" in the tug-o'-war between three big studios for "Country Lawyer." Well they might be enthused, for this best seller by Bellamy Partridge has sold 260,000 copies in three months. Partridge's biography of his country lawyer father is particularly valuable now for it is not unlike Clarence Day's "Life with Father," one of the three top hits on the Broadway stage. Whether in movies or on the stage the public seems to want more and more of these human, down-to-earth stories. The age range of the country lawyer will present a casting problem since the story starts in his youth and carries on to middle age. If the youth ankle is emphasized, Fred MacMurray is elected for the star role—but Walter Huston is also a likely candidate.

Has Marlene Dietrich, in "Destry Rides Again," set a fad for other glamour girls to go Western in a big way? Milton Bren is readying Jack Jevne's story, "Wyoming" with Margaret Sullavan in mind, and Margaret turning gun-toter is almost as surprising a bit of casting as Marlene's turn-about-face. However, "Wyoming" is the most different sounding Western I've heard about. There are to be no desert scenes or wide open plains. Instead, the entire action takes place in the Northwestern State during the heavy snows of winter. La Sullavan will play a pioneer buckskin-clad gal of the days when Custer was making his last expedition against the Indians.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: "Destry Rides Again" is now running in Pittsburgh. Jimmy Stewart's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stewart, live about 40 miles from here and they came to see their boy. Mrs. Stewart brought her knitting and stayed at the show all day; Michael Whalen whose father was a preacher here in Pittsburgh, managed a five-and-ten-cent store near the Stanley Theater where we are playing; William Powell went to school here and his childhood sweetheart still lives in town.

We all talked on the radio for the Sun-Telegraph the night we arrived. Ronald Reagan, who used to be an announcer was master of ceremonies; Karl Drug, the motion picture critic, interviewed me and the motion picture editors of all the papers sent me wires—which I think is swell; the mayor and the police commissioner sent us a welcome to the city—so is it any wonder we like Pittsburgh?

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Included in Perc Westmore's collection of lip prints, which are preserved on pieces of gauze, are those of Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Hedy Lamarr, Ann Sheridan, Carole Lombard, and every other star he has ever made up.

Pedigreed House

Jimmy Cagney has traced the history of the house on his farm at Marthas Vineyard back to 1723. No nails were used in its construction and the house stands as solidly now as it did then.

In Hollywood

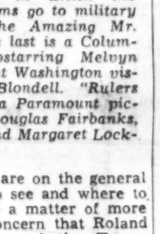
Hollywood, Dec. 4.

Somebody named Marlene Dietrich and Jimmie Stewart's new picture "Dastardly Rides Again." It certainly put Marlene over with a bang—and I do mean a bang! But what a supporting cast, Charlie Winninger, Brian Donlevy, Mischa Auer, Una Merkel, Warren Hymer, Allen Jenkins and Sam Hinds. Sam, who plays dignified bankers, was the one Frank Morgan was raving about when he came out. Said: "Gee, I'd better watch out—or he'll steal my stuff." So from now on, you can look for more star yuppees than you've ever counted at a dude ranch. At preview Marlene and Jimmy sat beside me and held hands. I wonder if Mae West and Bill Fields will do that when they preview "My Little Chicadee." Mae's got to go some, to out-yip Marlene.



HOPPER

The "Blue Bird" cottage was about to be torn down. But Director Walter Lang heard Mrs. Temple say they were going to build a large playhouse for Shirley as a guest house and save wear on the big house. So the cottage, complete with kitchen, living room, bedroom and bath, will be moved to the Temple house. Oh, to be Shirley Temple—now that Christmas is here.

Before the last election a young man named John Shelton Price decided he wanted to become a councilman. But in order to get his name on the ballot it was necessary to get thousands of signatures to a petition. Working fervently for two months John obtained the necessary quota of signers, then armed with this started to drive to the board offices. On the way stopped for cigarettes and when he returned found somebody had stolen his petitions. Disgusted he gave up politics, got himself and agent and just signed a job as a contract player with M-G-M.

Andrew Stone, director and producer of "The Great Victor Herbert," got his first taste of fame at preview of that picture. Mobbed by autograph fans, he was visibly embarrassed. You see, Stone is an inventor in addition to being a director. One of his inventions is a specially built camera, attached to a rigging and used by oil companies for drilling oil, and the royalties he gets from that brings him in more than his salary.

When the producers and directors were having their big powwow, Darryl Zanuck made an impassioned speech and said: "Well, all I've got is my contract." But didn't mention the amount. But Woody Van Dyke, who's never been afraid of anyone, got up and said: "Stop, you're breaking my heart," and left the meeting . . . Jack Joyce, a famous horse trainer, has traveled with the Ringling Circus all over the world. He was trained in the Spanish Riding Academy in Vienna, where those famous Lippizan horses come from. Jack's task now is to bring back a four-year memory for one of these horses, because it's been that long since he's been put through his paces. And I'll be darned if he isn't dong it. When he's finished, he'll probably be promoted to humans. Which may be more difficult—some here aren't as smart as horses . . . I don't think anybody enjoyed the second Thanksgiving of 1939 as much as Gov. Lewis Barrows of Maine. He was so incensed at "Roosevelt's Thanksgiving" that when he attended a banquet on November 23, he showed his disdain by opening a can of sardines and eating them instead of the turkey enjoyed by everybody else there.

Children Face Want Through Temporary Handicaps of Parents

even so there was not enough nourishment to keep 10-year-old Dick, who has always been frail, from losing more weight. He and the other four children need warm clothing, too, for there has been no money to buy it this winter—and last winter's left-overs are ragged.

enough nourishment to keep 10-year-old Dick, who has always been frail, from losing more weight. He and the other four children need warm clothing, too, for there has been no money to buy it this winter—and last winter's left-overs are ragged.

The children felt the cold, even more, when the family had to move to two dark basement rooms. They are there now.

The father is due to be discharged from the hospital within the next four weeks and, as soon as he can, he will try to go back to regular work. But without food, warmth and the security of paid-up rent for the next two months, this family may go under. With $150, the family can be fed, clothed and moved out of the basement to a more healthful atmosphere.

Family certified and help administered without cost by the American Legion welfare office.

Amount needed: $150.

A young mother is hoping desperately to keep her two children with her this Christmas and during the years ahead. She has to be both father and mother to them—and she cannot bear to think of breaking up her home and giving them up.

Her husband just walked off one day and didn't come back for a long time. She explains it this way: "You know he was young and never had responsibility. His mother shouldered most of his burdens and maybe I did, too. When he lost his job as a clerk in a store, he just couldn't face the pressure, and disappeared. When he came back, things weren't the same."

Well-meaning friends advised Mrs. K. to go to court when it appeared that the marriage was about broken. Mr. K. was ordered to pay $8 a week support, but of course that is not enough to support her and the two children, a boy of 10 and a girl of 8. So Mrs. K. found a temporary clerical job. Now this work is gone, but she has been promised another job in March.

She wants to work and keep her children with her, rather than to have to place them in a home. In the meantime the agency says "it is good planning to keep this family together, to give these children the privilege of remaining with their own mother." For $80 that can be done for these next three crucial months.

This family certified and help administered without cost by Catholic Charities.

$85 Will Save Family No. 8

Mr. R. has worked hard to bring up a family of seven children on a marginal income, year after year. Now he is jobless. He is over 50, but strong and eager to work. He doesn't feel old—until people tell him that he is, when he tries to get a laboring job in private industry.

With those words nagging at his courage, he goes back home—which he may call home only a little while longer because the family is threatened with eviction. The money for food and fuel has dwindled until even hope seems to be getting empty too.

Mr. R. was on WPA for a while, but was laid off two months before he ever came to seek outside help. He made his final check of $60.60 and earnings from odd jobs last the family for those two months. Three children, all of school age, are still at home. The agency which looked into the case has found that the four other children, who are married, cannot help out. It is all they can do to care for their own families.

Mrs. R. is doing all she can to help carry the family load by working at Self-Help Exchange for script which can be exchanged for clothes. The father's only hope is another WPA assignment, for he despairs of getting a job in private industry. It probably will take two months before a reassignment on WPA could come through, so $86 will be needed to carry the family over this period.

Family certified and help administered without cost by Family Service Association.

Amount needed: $86.

The 50 Neediest Families to be helped by The Post's Christmas Fund were selected by five family agencies, members of the Council of Social Agencies—the Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion Welfare Office, the Salvation Army and the Bureau of Rehabilitation.

They are not families who make a habit of looking for charity. They have struggled and sacrificed to carry their own burdens, but now they find themselves unable to ward off hunger, cold, homelessness, illness, without temporary help.

Most of them are "unemployed employables." They cannot look to public relief for their needs. And the private agencies do not have sufficient resources to meet all such emergencies.

By giving to the fund for the Neediest Families, a person will know in advance that the contribution not only will bring Christmas cheer to an otherwise cheerless home but will actually set a whole family on the path to hope, courage and self-support again.

Legal Clarification

In a unanimous opinion the Supreme Court has done an excellent job of clarifying what some believed to be a conflict between the antitrust laws and the agricultural marketing agreements act. Chief Justice Hughes has drawn such a vivid line of demarcation between the general application of the Sherman act and the limited scope of the marketing agreements statute that it is now difficult to see how the lower court went astray.

The Supreme Court held that the milk handlers of Chicago are not immune to conviction for alleged conspiracies in restraint of trade. The defendants include a trade association of milk distributors, a milk producers' cooperative, a milk-wagon drivers' union, certain Chicago officials and two price-fixing arbitrators. Charges of a conspiracy among these groups to violate the Sherman act had been dismissed by the district court. Judge Woodward had concluded that the production and marketing of agricultural products were removed from the purview of the Sherman act by the more recent statute permitting the Secretary of Agriculture to establish marketing agreements.

In effect, the decision of the lower court would have nullified the antitrust laws so far as the marketing of milk or other farm products is concerned. The Supreme Court found no justification whatever for that very broad assumption. By examining the statutes in question, Chief Justice Hughes has shown that only specific agricultural marketing agreements worked out in accord with the formula laid down by Congress are beyond reach of the Department of Justice in its enforcement of the antitrust laws. Otherwise the handlers of farm products are as answerable for combinations in restraint of trade as are manufacturers or businessmen.

Likewise the court rejected the idea that cooperative organizations are exempt from any and all prosecution under the Sherman act. "The right of these agricultural producers thus to unite in preparing for market and in marketing their products," the Chief Justice wrote, "and to make the contracts which are necessary for that collaboration, cannot be deemed to authorize any combination or conspiracy with other persons in restraint of trade that these producers may see fit to devise."

The contention that the Sherman act does not apply to labor union activities, the court said, was "not open on this appeal." The opinion leaves little doubt, however, that the court will continue to apply the antitrust laws to any combination found guilty of restraining trade. When cooperatives or labor unions participate in such illegal activities they can expect no different treatment than is accorded to merchants and industrialists.

An Increase In Money

Contrary to a widely held belief, changes in the amount of money in circulation are a very unreliable indication of fluctuations in business activity. That is because all sorts of passing disturbances and abnormal conditions may affect the demand for cash, regardless of how much business is being transacted.

At the depth of the depression, in March, 1933, when panic gripped the land, money in circulation—that is, money outside the Federal Reserve Banks and the Treasury—reached a record figure of $7,550,000,000. That money, of course, was not actually being passed from hand to hand to pay for goods and services. It was being hoarded by people who had lost confidence in their banks and had withdrawn it for safekeeping. Consequently, the seeming paradox of a record "circulation" of money coinciding with a major crisis that paralyzed economic activity.

That peak figure of 1933 has been almost reached again, following a steady and prolonged rise in the volume of money in circulation. This time, however, the upward movement appears to be associated with the current business revival in the absence of any special factors that would adequately account for the trend.

The actual volume of money in circulation is, no doubt, greater than it would be if conditions today were in all respects normal. The banks, for instance, have such a huge volume of idle reserves on hand that they need not hurry, as formerly, to redeposit cash received from the public. Such dilatoriness helps to swell the amount of currency in "circulation." There has also been considerable hoarding of money for foreign account as a result of the war and the disturbed state of the world.

The mere fact that money in circulation is again approaching a record figure evidently does not mean that a record volume of business is being transacted by passing cash from hand to hand. But the steady rise in circulation over a period of many months does indicate that, in addition to the special factors at work to increase the demand for currency, there is a growing need for cash to support an expansion of public buying power.

With Feet Of Clay?

That Russia is a Colossus is a point that needs no arguing. The map proves it. Statistical tables amplify the fact. Russia occupies one-sixth of the land surface of the earth. She has the largest population of any independent nation, with the sole exception of China.

Russia counts her army in millions, her reserves in tens of millions. She is supposed to have one of the largest air forces in the world, a vast accumulation of tanks, heavy and light artillery and all the other essentials of modern mechanized warfare.

These estimates of Russia's war capacity give the impression of tremendous potential strength amounting almost to invincibility. So, with the Russian bear again on the march, the tremors of fear which have been generated extend far beyond the immediate zone of trespass. Yet the fact is that Russia's real strength is unknown. The Colossus may be as strong as the Reds say it is. And again it may prove to have feet of clay.

In the struggle now raging in northeastern Europe the odds are overwhelmingly on the side of Russia. Theoretically, she should be able to achieve the anticipated victory in a very short time. But whether she does or not, the present struggle in Finland will doubtless provide at least a clue to the dark mystery of Russia's military power.

It took Germany about three weeks to smash Poland's army and take possession of three-fifths of that nation of 30,000,000 people. Finland's population is only one-sixtieth of Russia's. Yet the first days of the Baltic war indicate that the little Scandinavian democracy may prove no easy nut to crack. The air raids on Finnish cities have resulted in many deaths, much destruction and devastation. They have not destroyed the Finnish will to resist. And the apparent effectiveness of the anti-aircraft guns at Helsinki and elsewhere suggest that Russia will have to pay a price for her barbarous raids on civil populations.

Because of the Finnish fortifications and the narrowness of the Karelian Isthmus Russian numbers do not count for so much in that area. There the Finns have more than held their own. That appears to be equally true, for the time being, in the Arctic area. For instance, the Russians claim to have recaptured the port of Petsama. This has been denied. But the Russian claim does prove that, while Petsama was occupied by the invaders, they were soon driven out and thus forced to make a new attempt to take the city.

Considering her overwhelming odds, it is almost inconceivable that Russia can be held off indefinitely by the Finns. Moscow can afford to make blunder after blunder, wantonly sacrifice large numbers of men, planes and guns and yet have enough at the end to batter down Finnish resistance. Yet the longer it takes Russia to win the war the more her inner weaknesses will be exposed and that military prestige which she has enjoyed as a result of size will decline.

In other words, much more is at stake for Russia in this war than victory over Finland alone. Her prestige, in a military sense, is also involved. And with her moral position so thoroughly and so completely besmirched by her wanton action against a tiny neighbor, the maintenance of her military prestige is all important for Russia today.

Society Needs A Brain

Society has now reached a period when, according to Dr. Julian Huxley, it must develop a brain to continue its progress. Obviously he did not refer directly to the thinking apparatus of individuals. His concern is for the development of a sort of collective brain—a source of information, of planning, of experimentation and research—that will serve mankind in general.

Dr. Huxley believes that the social evolution of the human race has progressed only a little further than the age of fish in biological evolution. In terms of social evolution he thinks we have not yet advanced to the status of reptiles. So far as intellectual cooperation is concerned he has us still wiggling around in the slime.

"Education stops dead for most people in early adolescence," the distinguished British scholar said. If civilization is to continue developing as it has in past ages, he believes, society must multiply by tenfold, or perhaps fiftyfold, the number of individuals and institutions devoted to education, planning, the collection of information and development of mechanisms of social control. The work being done at present by the schools, the press, the radio, the churches, the theater and similar institutions must be greatly extended as well as being refined and revitalized.

The least that can be said for Dr. Huxley's thesis is that it offers a refreshing contrast to the customary lament that the machine age will necessarily consign millions of individuals to permanent unemployment. As human energies are increasingly released from the production of the necessities of life, opportunities are created for redirection of those energies into other channels. Too often we assume that there are no other pursuits that can be substituted for plowing a field or tending a factory machine.

It is not to be supposed, of course, that farmers or mechanics can be readily converted into artists and philosophers, or even teachers and editors. But that presumably does not disturb Dr. Huxley. He is thinking in terms of evolution. From the viewpoint of the hungry man looking for work, his counsel could be dismissed as irrelevant. From the viewpoint of the social scientist, however, it is of the greatest significance. For Dr. Huxley is saying in a particularly effective way what many other critics of the present age have said: that we are oversupplied with the necessities of life and critically lacking in social intelligence and moral control.

While such deficiencies exist, it can scarcely be said that the door of opportunity has been closed or that vast resources of human energy and intellect must necessarily be dissipated in frustration in the civilization of the future.

Japan Under Strain

Since the undeclared war on China began, 29 months ago, the prices of food fuel, clothing and lighting in Japan have increased 91 per cent, despite the drastic measures taken by the Tokyo government to check the steady upward trend.

The principal reason for the rising cost of living is, of course, the war. The conflict with China has undermined the Japanese economy. It has given rise to a temporary boom of considerable dimensions. War industries are working at full capacity, with the workers enjoying higher wages and the industrialists increased profits. Farmers have benefited by the boost in the price of rice and silk. But the steady rise in prices, the recurring shortages of staples, show that this bright medal has another and darker side. The failure of the rice crop in certain drought-stricken areas has further complicated a potentially dangerous situation.

The persistent rise in the price level involves a double danger for Japan. By nullifying higher wages it makes for social discontent. And the ultimate effect may be to weaken Japan's capacity to export, and thus to pay for supplies indispensable in war-making and for the efficient functioning of her industrial machine.

What makes matters worse is that the long-sustained hope that the war in China was nearing its end is now fading. The Japanese have not even succeeded in setting up a puppet central Chinese government, let alone forcing Chiang Kai-shek to capitulate. And as the war continues the strain on Japanese economy grows more severe.

No wonder, then, that the more moderate elements in Japan are looking for a way out of the dilemma on which the militarists have impaled the island empire. They are frankly worried both by the domestic and the international situation. Japan today finds herself in an isolated position, all the more dangerous because the war in China is far from ending. And Russian aggression in the Baltic revives fears that some day Stalin will also imitate the Far-Eastern policy of the czars and renew the old Russian drive for a warm water port in Asia.

In the meantime, denunciation by the United States of the Japanese-American commercial treaty threatens in another fashion by making it seem probable that this country will withdraw most-favored-nation privileges from Japan in the American market.

There is no doubt that Japanese moderates would now like nothing better than a rapprochement with the United States. Such a development depends, however, on a drastic change in Japan's course. Can the civil authorities in Tokyo make such a change? Will the militarists be willing to approve a negotiated peace with China? It is a vital question on which the Nomura-Grew conversations may throw some light.

Red Flannel Renaissance

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Whatever may be the complex of factors responsible for the return of red-flannel underwear, the fact is that it is back in style again. That duck hunters have never entirely abandoned it, seems less important to us than that it is being worn this year by college girls. Life concurs in this opinion, for while it prints the pictures of a number of charmingly red-flannelled young women, it doesn't devote any space to a description of what they are wearing along the duck passes this fall.

The red-flannel sign is a healthier one than the revival of the corset. It doesn't suggest a retrogression to the age when women couldn't exercise. It probably has reappeared because flimsier material could not make the grade at skiing, or the snow festival at Dartmouth. Then, too, it was always regarded as a symbol of security against rheumatism, or whatnot. When the younger generation puts on red flannel—right next to the skin—isn't it about time for the older generation to admit that the country is safe?

Cement Vs. Natural Beauty

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is hard to reconcile two recent editorials in The Post, one on December 3 called "Along the Potomac," advocating the preservation and development of the river's natural beauties, and the other a few days ago, applauding the Gravelly Point airport, which has wrought sickening destruction of the Potomac's beauty and charm.

A recent letter signed "Engineer" points out that this airport is misplaced from practical as well as scenic considerations. Another correspondent asks why a flood of protests did not prevent it.

The answer is that the Gravelly Point enterprise, like the destruction of the Mall, the so-called "Parks Rehabilitation Program" and the unpopular Thomas Jefferson Memorial, was quietly put over before the public was allowed to become aware of what was going on. By the time they were let in on the secret the steam shovels were at work and the vandalisms were accomplished.

When aroused public sentiment did manifest itself in a wave of general indignation, as was notably the case a year ago in regard to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, the denunciations—although they came from civic and national organizations all across the country as well as from local bodies—were airily brushed aside by President Roosevelt and characterized as "flimflam."

So one more esthetic crime has been perpetrated upon Washington in the wanton destruction of the beautiful Mount Vernon highway, which for its brief existence was the pride and pleasure of countless thousands.

And when the resulting floods occur, which engineers predict as a logical sequel to the bottling up of the river, well, of course, that will provide a perfect justification for still another lucrative concrete, cement and gravel "project."

City Traffic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been quite interested in a series of articles presented recently by your Mr. Wentworth concerning traffic conditions in Washington.

On more than one occasion, I have written to Mr. Van Duser to point out that the present system of timing of traffic lights on arterial highways often proves unsatisfactory under varying traffic conditions.

I think, however, that Mr. Wentworth made a mistake when he stated publicly that traffic moved smoothly on Thirteenth street. It has moved smoothly at times, but this morning I was compelled to stop for very nearly the full interval of the red light at every intersection between Spring road and P street.

Possibly the authorities, having ascertained the truth of Mr. Wentworth's statement regarding Thirteenth street, have immediately taken steps to retard the traffic to insure against excessive speed, and I think that in the future Mr. Wentworth would do well if he discovers that if any particular street permits a smooth flow of traffic, to keep it to himself.

There are only two ways to solve the problem, in my humble opinion. One is to increase the timing for the green light on arterial highways above the strictly business district and correspondingly decrease the timing of the green light on cross traffic. The other solution is to abolish altogether the so-called staggered system of timing and to adopt at least outside of congested business districts a system similar to that employed with success in New York.

I hope that Mr. Wentworth's articles will have some effect in promoting at least a series of experiments with other systems of timing.

Gannett For President

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is encouraging news in the Associated Press dispatch from Spokane that Mr. Frank E. Gannett, of New York State, has made a "virtual declaration" of candidacy for the Republican nomination for President in 1940. He is the kind of a leader we need so badly.

His brilliant success in leading national thought during the past few years has been widely recognized by those most closely connected with the actual course of events in Washington. He has been the one national leader who has proved to be able to defeat the present Administration consistently on every important issue he has raised.

As chairman of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government he mobilized the millions of people who made themselves so felt in Washington that the hitherto passive Congress rose to its feet and defeated the Supreme Court-packing bill; the dictatorial first reorganization bill.

But Mr. Gannett is far from being merely the most successful and powerful opponent of the most unwise policies of the present Administration. He has a definite program of his own for the constructive restoration of a reasonable level of prosperity in this country. He is one of those who is determined that scientific principles should guide our national economic policy rather than the dangerous superstitions which have prevented us from recovery from the present deflation and its awful human suffering.

The People Who Fight

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a curious anomaly that the frightful wars of today are ordered and directed by men in secure places and high positions, who never fire a gun or unsheathe a sword, while they are fought by men who do not know each other, have no quarrel with each other, and are inclined to be friendly and to trade cigarettes between the lines. It is the Hitlers, the Mussolinis, the Stalins, the Chamberlains and the Daladiers, who however good or bad their motives may be—order the battles. It is the simple people—"even as you and I"—who fight them. They talk of the United States of Europe. It should be the United People of Europe. When the people decide to elect their own rulers by ballot, to limit their powers and their terms of office, we shall have peace, and not before.

Traffic Jam

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read the article in Tuesday's Post by your Mr. Howard F. Wentworth concerning the traffic congestion on M street between Twenty-ninth street and Key Bridge. This article gave a true picture of the existing conditions between 4:30 and 6 p. m. I ride the Virginia buses daily. On Monday and Tuesday it took us 30 minutes to traverse M street from Twenty-ninth street to Key Bridge.

As Mr. Wentworth pointed out, this congestion was due to the poor timing of the traffic lights. Since his article appeared conditions have improved. Since Wednesday it is possible to traverse M street with little or no delay. I am sure your many readers appreciate this public service rendered by your paper. Keep the good work up. Let us have better light timing.

Resisting War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If war comes to this country, is one morally obliged to participate regardless of the nature of the war? Is the old saw about "my country, right or wrong" the final guiding thought in such circumstances? A person who fully retains his sanity under such circumstances will doubtless have other thoughts to guide him.

But regardless of what his thoughts may be, he will (if he be an able-bodied man) be faced with a very stark, very brutal reality: he will have very little choice in the matter. His country will call and the brave citizens of his country will come forward and offer their services and, if need be, their lives. When this happens one will feel very uncomfortable if he does not do likewise. But there will be more than moral discomfiture—he will not be dismissed merely with the epithet "coward."

On the contrary, that epithet would hardly fit anyone who has the stamina to resist all of the importunities of his country as it calls him to war. While the brave ones will answer the call, only the very bravest of the brave will have the courage to resist the call—to maintain clear thinking while from every direction come insidious appeals to his emotion and threats to his freedom.

Yes, only the bravest of the brave—and only the sincerest humanitarians—will have the iron determination to adhere to the human ethics which are illegalized by the advent of war and to refuse to become a party to the wholesale murder which war makes legal. On a normal day, the normal human being has no desire either to kill or to be killed. These things are, in fact, most repugnant to him. Civilization depends on the continuation of this antipathy toward destruction, while war can be carried on only in so far as this basis of civilization is overcome.

When war comes, how many will be brave enough, clear-headed enough to resist the insidious importunities, appeals, and threats—in spite of the possibility of being called a coward, in spite of the propaganda and hysteria of war, in spite of the artificial glorification of large-scale murder? How many will retain that human decency which is illegalized by war and steadfastly refrain from participation in the brutality which is made legal, even compulsory, by the advent of war?

How many will clearly consider the nature of the war, and rationally decide whether it is a just war, whether or not the war is for the defense of anything that he values, whether or not the war is in the interests of the people of his country? How many, having made these rational decisions, will be brave enough steadfastly to act on them, and, on the basis of them, rather than on the basis of the insidious war propaganda to which he will be subjected, either support or denounce the war?

New England Thanksgiving

The prospect of my first Thanksgiving in New England did not excite me greatly. I had already survived one holiday in Boston in the shape of Columbus Day, and I was not enthusiastic at the thought of another. Nothing that I have encountered elsewhere is quite so funereal as the gloom that descends over the town on such occasions.

The shops, restaurants, theaters, libraries, museums, and all other places of human resort are rigorously closed, or at least they were some 15 years ago, and there is nothing for the hapless stranger to do except to walk through the Common and Public Gardens, in imminent danger of death from starvation and boredom.

Consequently, when Charles Travis invited me to spend the day with his mother and him, I was pathetically grateful. Where could one enjoy Thanksgiving Day more fittingly than in the Back Bay, the very center of the land where Thanksgiving Day was first invented?

Promptly at 9 on Thanksgiving morning Charles drove up in his open Ford. (This was back in 1925, mind you.) I was presented to his mother, a woman with very black eyes and very white hair, who was all wrapped up in a multitude of coats, scarves, fur neckpieces, gloves and blankets, while Charles was respendent in his raccoon coat. I started to climb back into the back seat, but Charles stopped me.

"You'd better get a heavier coat," he warned me. "It's rather cold this morning, you know."

"Oh, no," I assured him airily, "I shall be quite comfortable." Why, I wondered, would one need a heavy coat, merely to drive from Cambridge over to Boston?

The truth of the matter was that I didn't have a heavier coat. Harvard in my day was hardly a dressy place, and my friends there were probably among the least dressy in the whole college. Until I went away to school I had never been farther North than Memphis, Tenn., and my idea of extreme cold was something in the neighborhood of 20 degrees above zero.

I had prepared myself for a New England winter by surreptitiously appropriating an overcoat of my father's which he had worn once or twice a few years back and then discarded because it was too impossibly heavy. When my father sent me some money with instructions to buy a good, heavy, warm overcoat, I had emulated the clerk of Oxenford and spent the most of it for Oxford Jane Austen. Dad's overcoat, I decided, would do me very well, and although I was not the glass of fashion in it, I was by no means conspicious among my friends.

So I wrapped myself snugly in Dad's overcoat and settled down in the back seat, while visions of turkey breast danced through my head.

"It's such a lovely day," Mrs. Travis said, after Charles got the Ford in motion, "that we decided to go for a drive in the country. Won't that be lovely?"

I agreed that it would be indeed delightful.

It was decidedly not a lovely day. It was bitterly cold, a biting wind was blowing, and greasy, nasty black clouds were rolling round the sky.

Mrs. Travis and Charles, from the comfort of their furs, chatted gayly, and I tried heroically to join in the conversation above the noise of the motor, and the whistling of the wind, and the chattering of my teeth. We talked about the symphony, and how devine Mr. Koussevitsky was, and how Skriabin excelled all other composers. Then Mrs. Travis began to talk about the mystical content of Skriabin's music and held forth for an hour, enthusiastically seconded by her son.

In the meantime it was growing colder and colder, the charming New England countryside was buried beneath shop-worn snow, and my feet, fortunately, had become numb. We drove literally for hours. About noon Charles announced that we had reached New Hampshire. It began to snow in big sticky blobs.

We were driving among the hills now. Mrs. Travis said that they were the White Mountains or the Green Mountains, I forgot which. It doesn't matter, for they were really the Himalayas. At the top of a peak (Mount Everest, I am sure) Mrs. Travis said cheerily, "And now we can have our Thanksgiving dinner! Where could we find a lovelier view?" I knew then that I had become delirious from exposure.

"Charles and I are vegetarians, you know," Mrs. Travis informed me, as she unwrapped three meager bundles. "I hope you don't mind. I fixed you a nice vegetarian dinner, too, for I simply couldn't bear the thought of having meat in the house. So degrading, you know, to think of eating dead animals!" With that she handed me my New England Thanksgiving dinner, all nicely wrapped in brown paper.

I opened my parcel with rigid fingers and discovered an orange, a banana, some dates and figs, and a handful of salted nuts. We sat by the side of the road, the wind howling and the snow flying, and ate our Thanksgiving dinners, washed down by good, hot cocoa from a thermos bottle.

When after an eternity of torture I was deposited numb and almost speechless at my lodgings, I looked up Willie, a lad from Alabama who spent most of his time sitting on a radiator, and we prepared some hot toddies. After we had drunk a goodly number of them, we went across to Boston for dinner at a bootleg eating place that defied the law by serving meals on a holiday.

The waiter beamed, "Of course, you gentlemen will have our special New England Thanksgiving dinner?"

The violence of my reply startled even Willie.

All Is Confusion

DR. Frank R. Robinson, of Moscow, Idaho, has been in our midst briefly and has endeavored to set your correspondent right on some matters pertaining to the God business which is enjoying a boom at the present writing. Dr. Robinson, who answers to the name of Doc, is the man who advertises that he was a box-car bum but talked with God and speedily acquired a magnificent home with a pipe organ, a Cadillac limousine for himself, other cars.

Diminuendo, for his wife and son, "a lot of life insurance" and a bank account sufficient to withstand the tap of a check in five figures. He charges $20 per head for a correspondence course in his copyrighted religious philosophy, called Psychiana, and sicks a collection agency on deadbeats, backsliders and flunks who try to gyp him of his payments. But he asserts, notwithstanding his rise to wealth and this firm insistence on his ownings, that he does not desire to make money out of Psychiana. His attempt to set your correspondent right thus leaves your correspondent's confusion worse confounded, but perhaps you can figure it out.

Expresses Disbelief In Great I Am

THE DOC, who has been advertising in a New York paper of late, said he was doing a lot of business here and expressed disbelief in several current competitors in the God business, particularly G. W. Ballard, of Los Angeles, known as the Great I Am. Mr. Ballard's widely scattered believers labor under an impression—which may be correct, for all your correspondent knows to the contrary—that he is the reincarnation of George Washington, that his wife is the reincarnation of Joan of Arc and that a gaseous God-force known as K-17 recently destroyed a fleet of hostile submarines somewhere off the American shores with a sword of purple flame. They also shun onions and garlic as being offensive to the ascender masters. The least implausible of all their tenets, some of which are rather trying, they abhor the color red for the evil vibrations which it projects into the world but nevertheless vow allegiance to the American flag and wear the same, red stripes and all, on their lapels. Doc Robinson says he doesn't believe a word of Mr. Ballard's revelations, insisting that they are against reason, and adds that, anyway, he can't make head nor tail of the I Am religion. He refers to various of these new philosophies and faiths, including his own, as "stuff." That is to say, he speaks of "my stuff" and Ballard's "stuff," Father Divine's "stuff" and Dr. Edwin John Dingle's "stuff," this latter being something called Mental Physics, Inc., of Los Angeles, of course. His skepticism toward the others and his scoffing certainty that they are fallacious reminded your correspondent of old Doc Townsend's recent contemptuous verdict, delivered at the height of the Ham-and-Eggs campaign in Los Angeles, that the Thirty-Thursday proposition was economically unsound.

'Keep Off My Stuff,' Ballard Was Warned

IN SPEAKING of his stuff, Doc Robinson's tone is one of proprietary pride and jealousy, like that of a radio comic with a prosperous, sure-fire specialty who is wary of pirates and poachers. He says Ballard called on him when he, Ballard, "was just starting out."

"I told him I didn't mind," the Doc says, "just so he doesn't infringe my copyright. I just warned him to keep off my stuff."

Nevertheless, the Doc insists that Ballard's stuff in parts is very similar to his stuff, even though he can't make head nor tail of Ballard's stuff. "I am not interested in saving souls," says he, "that is orthodox. I want to raise the mental and spiritual sights of the people. And if I didn't copyright my stuff I would have every faker in the country using it, because I have got a religious philosophy that is a stem-winder. There is no legal way to stop a faker. With a guy like that all you can do is just let them alone and they'll blow up."

From that you will understand just how the Doc stands on religious fakers.

Regarding the uncommercial spirit in which he proceeds to raise the mental and spiritual sights of his fellow men and the resort to force, as it were, to compel payment for his courses in this consoling and enriching philosophy, Doc Robinson was unable to turn the flank or penetrate the center of your correspondent's obtuseness. Altruist though he claims to be, he nevertheless does not release his secret of happiness and material wealth freely to human kind, but restricts it to those who can undertake to pay $20. He frankly states in his advertising copy that he requires enough money above expenses "to grow." That is an exact way of putting it, and taken with the Doc's rather ostentatious description of his own wealthy condition, the mansion, the organ, the cars, bank roll and all, it leaves your correspondent as earnestly puzzled as before.

42-Cylinder Plane Motor Perfected

Philadelphia, Dec. 4 (AP).—Development of a liquid-cooled, 42-cylinder motor that may propel one of the world's fastest planes was disclosed tonight at annual convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Dr. Alexander Klemin, professor of aeronautics at New York University, said the motor was being built by "one of the major engine manufacturers" but because of Government secrecy no details were available.

Authorities said such a motor should develop a speed of more than 400 miles an hour. The largest airplane engine now in use has only 18 cylinders. A 48-cylinder, 4,000-horsepower Italian engine was developed recently, but has not been adopted for practical military purposes because it cannot carry adequate fuel for long distance flying.

Exit On The Left

By Benjamin Stolberg

The End Of The Communist Party

(This is the sixth and final article on "The Collapse of American Communism," by Benjamin Stolberg, well known writer and lecturer.)

THE COMMUNIST Party of the United States is through. It is impossible to forsee exactly what forms its disintegration will assume. But one can predict them pretty well in general. And one thing seems certain: as a disruptive political and social force the party cannot last.

Stalinism is political cannibalism: it devours its own creatures. Stalin has never hesitated to sacrifice his parties abroad for the sake of keeping power at home.

In Germany, Stalin forced the party to cooperate with Hitler; and when Hitler came to power he promptly killed it. In Spain, Stalin used the party as Franco's Fifth Column; and when Franco came to power he promptly killed it. In Poland, Stalin himself killed the party in agreement with the Polish government, actually summoning the leaders to Moscow and shooting them. The same thing was true in the Baltic and Balkan parties.

AND NOW, through his alliance with Hitler, Stalin has betrayed his parties in the democracies and necessarily prepared the way for their "liquidation."

The question is, will Stalin try to keep his American party going at all? The answer is, as long as possible. For this there are several reasons.

Stalin Needs Phony Revolutionary Party

AS SOON as it became evident that Stalin was really Hitler's ally the Communist Party rapidly began to slough off it "democratic" verbiage and to revive the ancient ultra-revolutionary slogans of the first World War.

This turn was merely made official in the new "Communist manifesto" of November 6 and Molotov's speech of the same day. Herr Stalin could no longer get away with the democratic pose. And at this juncture a fake revolutionary party in America is just what Stalin needs.

He needs it, among other things, as a cover for espionage and sabotage in industrial plants, shipping and communications. As Trotsky shrewdly said, Stalin is Hitler's military ally, even though he dares not fight.

MOREOVER, Stalin needs his American party to continue, as long as possible, to create confusion in the unions, the progressive world, and above all in the peace movement.

Before the pact, he needed the party to plug for "collective security against Fascism." Now he needs it as a "transmission belt" for Stalinazi propaganda.

THE COMMUNIST Party will try its utmost to hold its followers in high posts in the unions and in government agencies, even to the point of permitting them to repudiate Stalinism publicly. But this kind of thing is too close to espionage, and it is a safe guess that the fellow traveling opportunists will have no stomach for it.

This distrust of any but devoted die-hards will, of course, enhance the role of the party apparatus and increase the power of its GPU kernel as the decisive element in the party life. In short, the party will become decreasingly a "party" and increasingly a GPU affair. And at this moment that is precisely what the Russo-German axis needs in America.

The New Mask Will Not Fit

STALIN has yet another reason for maintaining as long as possible his parties in the democratic countries, in South America, in India —everywhere, under or above ground. Although he has killed communism and the Communists —thousands of them—he still believes in Lenin as a prophet, though not as a leader. And he expects the revolutionary uprisings he calls for. But he knows that real social revolution—as against GPU-inspired massacres—will mean the end of Stalinism and of Stalin.

That's why he has used the GPU to knife every revolutionary movement, as in Germany and Spain, and even ordinary progressive labor movements like the C. I. O. That is one reason why he will maintain the party in America as long as possible, even though it shrinks to nothing but the bought-and-paid-for bureaucrats like the Browders.

But this whole new "revolutionary" movement will not work.

THE MAIN reason is that, though we may be neutral, and may even remain neutral, this country is against Hitler. Moreover, it is against Fascism, no matter what the color.

The next insuperable obstacle is the fact that this new revolutionary mask just won't fit. Hitler's Charlie Chaplin mustache or even Stalin's more luxuriant growth just won't resemble Karl Marx's beard.

The Communist Party announced a fake revolutionary line 'way back in 1928. The American public, except the labor movement, did not even know it. When in 1935 the party announced its fake democratic line, the public still did not know, for its acquaintance with the Communist Party did not antedate the "popular front" period. But the present about-face was made in the full glare of international publicity, and was greeted with hostility, disgust and laughter.

Penthouse Reds Are Quitting Party

IN 1937 and 1938, at the height of its "democratic" popularity the Communist Party had some 75,000 members and probably several hundred thousand fellow travelers and sympathizers. Of these the vast majority were of course not revolutionary, indeed knew nothing of socialist doctrine, of the modern labor movement, or of what it was all about.

But before the Russo-German alliance, it was quite the fashion to be a "Communist," for Stalin has made the revolution safe for democracy. Now these ladies and gentlemen who played at revolution are through with it, especially the penthouse Bolshevik, the careerist intellectuals, and the revolutionary slummers among the rich and well-to-do.

THE MAJORITY of the radical workers, on the other hand, will not be taken in by the new "revolutionary" turn. They know it for the swindle that it is. In fact, it was the most progressive workers in the C. I. O. who were never fooled by the Stalinist racket; they were in the opposition all the time.

In organized labor, the Communist Party will continue to do its best to prevent peace between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., for it knows that it could never play even a declining role in a united labor movement. It would be through the day peace was signed. The Stalinists will also try to exploit John Lewis's growing isolationism and antagonism to the Administration. If Lewis allows himself to be thus exploited, there is every danger that the C. I. O. may go down along with the Communist Party. Already the situation in the National Maritime Union and the American Communications Association—in which Stalinist agents are very active because of their strategic importance in case of war—is probably too hot for the C. I. O. to handle.

But on the whole, the Communist Party in any guise is at the beginning of its rapid end in American labor.

Fronts May Also Vanish

THE COMMUNIST Party is likely to dissolve the League for Peace and Democracy and its other innocent fronts or to cut them adrift to die of inanition. They are too compromised to be of much further use. It is significant that the New York local of the American Federation of Teachers, which is Communist-controlled, discontinued its affiliation with the League for Peace and Democracy on Communist initiative.

The Communist Party will be forced to attack the New Deal with increasing vehemence, though is will claim to be the guardian of its social program, Browder has already attacked the President in his Boston speech as the mouthpiece of economic royalists.

The basic Stalinist objection to the Administration, as Browder made very clear, is its foreign policy. But the Stalinists will supplement this basic objection to Roosevelt's "betrayal" of his own progressivism. And as the Administration moves against the party as a foreign agency, it will yell bloody murder that its civil liberties are being violated—as though the Bill of Rights guaranteed the unrestricted right of espionage.

For a foreign agency, masked as an American party, to attack the United States Government is, of course, dangerous business. Decent people must insist that there be no witch-hunts of Communists. To be sure, there can be no martyrdom for the inner clique which runs the Communist Party. For a renegade revolutionary "martyrdom" is merely the last refuge of a scoundrel. But thousands of party members and fellow travelers are only innocent dupes. And our civil liberties are far too precious to be soiled by persecution of any kind.

THE NEW Communist Party line is now complete. It is for "social revolution"—in behalf of the Hitler-Stalin axis. German planes dropped over Paris Molotov's appeal for peace—on Hitler's terms. Only one sardonic, but logical touch can still be added: The Communist Party may come out for Nazi Germany as a socialist society, and attempt to represent the war as a struggle of "socialism" versus "fake democracy."

Stalinist hecklers have already rejected this grotesque idea at several New York meetings. Since the Russo-German alliance, the whole communistic press has become careful in its reference to the Nazi leaders; the leading "betrayers of democracy" are Chamberlain and Daladier and—more cautiously—Franklin Roosevelt.

The Communist Party—as a socialist party—died when Stalin had finally established his personal rule in Russia. The Moscow trials dramatized, the end of revolutionary Bolshevism. Only its ghost had been parading in the west in democratic finery; and for the moment in pseudo-revolutionary rags. But the masquerade is over. Exit on the left!

Russian Menace

By Mark Sullivan

Plot Suspected

THE RUSSIAN invasion of Finland began on Wednesday. By Friday, in the tiny bit of Finland's territory conquered by Russia, there was set up a new government of Finland, a "puppet" government, a Communist government. This puppet government was made up of Finnish Communists, many of them connected with the Communist Internationale. It was a complete government. Over-night, there was a complete cabinet, a completely functioning government. Instantly, this puppet Communist government was recognized by Russia, as the true Finnish government. With this puppet Communist government, Russia instantly made a treaty.

Everybody knows, of course, that all this was not accomplished in the 48 hours between Wednesday and Friday. Everybody knows it must have been prepared beforehand, in minute detail. The puppet government must have been in existence, on paper, secretly, underground. It must have had understanding with Russia; must have had constant touch with Russia for months and years; must have been prepared in minute detail to do what Russia wanted.

This throws light on the nature of Russia's war on Finland. It is not primarily an imperialistic war, a war for territorial acquisition. Primarily it is a war for the extension of communism.

Russia Uses Arms To Complete Intrigue

WHO CAN DOUBT that in other small countries close by Russia, the Balkan countries, for example, there is prepared, already in existence, underground, the same sort of puppet Communist government that Russia had in Finland, ready to function whenever Russia begins invasion or otherwise gives the signal?

What Russia is doing is extending communism. Its method is nine-tenths intrigue. It uses arms when, as in Finland, intrigue is not quite enough. Russia uses arms merely to complete the work of intrigue.

Even in countries not bordering on Russia, and therefore not subject to immediate invasion, the technique is the same. In Spain there was, first, Communist intrigue fomented by Russia. When that reached the stage of armed conflict, Russia sent airplanes, supplies and money.

Now it is not conceivable that Russia should ever invade the United States. But we know that Russian intrigue within the United States has been going on for 19 years, during the past few years with increasing momentum. Would it be too much to suspect that there is in the United States, underground but ready, the same sort of puppet Communist government that Russia had ready in Finland?

When we face an enemy that operates mainly by conspiracy, we become suspicious, and our suspicions may go beyond facts. Always subject to this qualification, let us consider a speech that Mr. Earl Browder, head of the Communist organization in the United States, made in Boston on Sunday, November 5. Mr. Browder said that the United States, "despite the political backwardness as yet of our working class, is technically, objectively, the country which is most ripe, the most prepared, for a quick transition to socialism. . . ."

'Quick Transition' Stirred Suspicion

TWO OF THOSE words aroused, the following day, suspicion in a high American quarter. That American source of thought which is circumlocutiously called "persons close to the White House," was described in dispatches coming from Hyde Park, N. Y., as having been impressed by the phrase, "quick transition." An Associated Press dispatch said, "Mr. Roosevelt was represented as feeling that if it should be held that a 'quick transition' is the parlor term for revolution, then Browder and the party of which he is general secretary in the United States might be held guilty of conspiracy against the Government."

Remembering always that when we are obliged to deal with conspiracy our suspicions may be unduly aroused, there is another phrase in that quotation from Mr. Browder's speech that excites interest. Mr. Browder describes America as "the most prepared for a quick transition."

Does that word "prepared" merely mean that America is in a condition in which a quick transition might be effected? Or does "prepared" mean that the organization and mechanism to take over the Government, if and when transition is effected, is already in existence secretly?

Is Mr. Browder, or anyone else, carrying around in his pocket, or in his head for greater secrecy, a list O. K.'d by Stalin, of the first Communist cabinet of the United States Soviet Republic?

America had better be oversuspicious than over-tolerant, over-easygoing. A country which would tolerate a conspiracy against its government, after it has reason to suspect the conspiracy exists, would be by that very fact too soft for self-defense, ripe for destruction. In normal times, reluctance to believe the incredible can be understood, but we live in a time in which the incredible happens all about us. And we know that there are among us many gullible innocents who are willing to do the work of communism, when that work is presented to them under a name and cloak, a "front," bearing some vaguely humanitarian title.

Chair Firm Dominates Unions, NLRB Rules

Dissolution of "company-dominated" associations of workmen in the Milne Chair Co., of Chattanooga, Tenn., was ordered yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board.

The board, in upholding a trial examiner's finding, sustained the contention of Daniel B. Maher, attorney for Local 1882 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters (A. F. of L.) that the associations were company dominated.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Dangerous To Abandon Finns

THE QUESTION is whether the neutrals of the world, the United States included, can and should help the Finns, or whether they should abandon them to destruction, doing no more than to express in words their horror and their indignation. This is a question which cannot be evaded but has to be faced and answered.

If the question is faced candidly, it will appear, I believe, that it is more dangerous to abandon the Finns than to help them, that it is more imprudent to stand by and let them be destroyed than it is to organize diplomatic support and take practical measures now to stop the advance of Soviet Russia.

For if Stalin conquers Finland, immediately thereafter Sweden and Norway will be in as great danger as was Finland a month ago. Let us not forget that the naval and aerial attack on Finland is being conducted from the Estonian bases which Stalin acquired in October. If Finland falls, Stalin will acquire bases from which he can dominate Stockholm absolutely, and he will have a land frontier with Norway which brings him within reach of a port on the Atlantic Ocean.

Just as the fall of Austria made Czecho-Slovakia indefensible, and the fall of Czecho-Slovakia made Poland indefensible, so the fall of Finland would make the whole of Scandinavia indefensible. The choice is to save Finland now, or to be confronted in the near future with a Bolshevik empire which can be liquidated only at an incalculable cost.

Communist Conquest Wipes Out Leaders

THE CONQUESTS of the Communists, like the conquest of the Nazis, are radically different from the ordinary military occupation of a foreign country. As we have seen in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and in both halves of Poland, these conquerors do not merely occupy the territory of their victims; they deliberately exterminate the leaders of the vanquished nation. When they take possession of a country, they systematically kill, imprison, and exile the political, economic, intellectual and religious leaders in order to deprive the peasants and workers and small merchants of any organized leadership around which they can rally.

This has been the Nazi and Communist program in Poland. It is the Communist program in Finland, and after Finland, unless Sweden surrenders and becomes a vassal, it will be the program in the rest of Scandinavia. These revolutionary imperialists do not merely attack states: they strike at the actual men who are the natural leaders of the nations they conquer. They strike at these men because by exterminating these men, they hope to make it impossible for the mass of the people to resist and to rise again.

So the problem today is not like the problem of liberating Belgium in the other war; once a country is conquered by these present-day imperialists, it must expect an absolutely ruthless purge of the patriots who, because they have experience and capacity for leadership, can bring about a resurrection of the nation.

That is why a failure to prevent the conquest of Scandinavia will mean that the eventual liberation of Scandinavia would be enormously difficult. If it is an interest of mankind that these free, honest, and innocent northern peoples should survive, then the place to organize the resistance is in Finland and the time to organize it is now.

Sentimental Gesture Is Not Enough

IT CAN BE done, I believe, but it cannot be done merely by uttering indignant words, and by making a sentimental gesture like breaking off diplomatic relations and then standing by helplessly while Finland and Scandinavia are overrun. Instead of breaking off diplomatic relations, we should use our diplomatic position actively to make plainer and plainer to the government in Moscow, and its partner in Berlin, that we are not abandoning the Finns. To break off relations with Russia at this moment is not to help the Finns but to abandon them. We should remain in Moscow not because we approve of the regime but because we have things to say that we mean to have Moscow hear.

And to make it plain that what we say is not mere words we should, if the Congressional leaders in this country will give it their approval, declare that the neutrality act will not be applied against Finland or any other Scandinavian state. For surely it would be an unthinkable humiliation to the American people to reward Finland for the payment of her debts by denying her credit in this hour of Finland's direst need.

Not only should we decline to apply the provisions of the neutrality act which would shut off credit to Finland, but we should go further: we hould not only remit the December payment on the Finnish debt but we should make available to Finland as an initial credit a sum equal to what she has already paid on the debt. Nor is that all. We should facilitate and give priority to Finland, and to Sweden if the Swedes wish it, on any munitions of war that can be obtained here and used for the defense of Scandinavia. We should not only refuse to sell bombers to Russia but we should make it as practicable as possible for Finland to obtain bombers.

Consultation With Italy Suggested

HAVING SHOWN that we are not dealing in righteous words alone, we should then use the influence this will give us in order to give Finland active diplomtic support.

We should consult, I believe, with Italy as the only neutral great power in Europe, and find out whether it is possible for Italy and the United States to work together for the support of the northern neutrals against the incursion of Russian bolshevism. Moreover, the Finns have appealed to the League. We should follow the precedent set by Mr. Hoover in the Manchurian affair and send a representative to the meeting.

The object of this diplomatic action should be to rally the neutrals who were indirectly menaced; to encourage them to unite and to give them the diplomatic and economic backing of Italy and the United States.

This is a policy of diplomatic and economic intervention for the purpose of stopping, before it goes any further, the Communist aggression against the democracies of Northern Europe. It involves risk and trouble. The only question is whether the risks and the trouble will be smaller if we act energetically now than if we wait until Finland has fallen, and the horror we are now witnessing moves westward over Sweden and Norway.

The risks of acting now are much less, it seems to me, than the risks of inaction which allow bolshevism to get itself established in Scandinavia. For I take it that the American people are realizing that this sort of thing has got to be stopped somewhere, and that they realize how it would augment the power of Communism throughout the world, not only in Europe and in the Orient but in this hemisphere as well, if Stalin can overrun the northern democracies and prove that the moral indignation of the free nations when put to the test, counts for nothing whatsoever.

That will break the spirit of all who would like to resist him, and encourage very many others, including perhaps our neighbor across the Pacific, to enter into a partnership with him.

Shirley Temple Goes To School

("Shirley Temple, now 10 years old, has started going to school in Hollywood."—News item).

Teacher—Now, Shirley, I'm glad to welcome you to school and I hope you'll like it.

Shirley—Thank you, teacher; I hope you'll like me, too.

Teacher—Like you? Why, my dear, I've never missed one of your pictures.

Shirley—Did you see my last one?

Teacher—Don't tell me you've made your last one! Ahem. Now let us get down to school matters. How about mathematics? Can you add?

Shirley—I've never tried. My bank does all that for me.

Teacher—Do you understand geometry?

Shirley—Mother read it, but said there was no part in it that suited me.

Teacher—How about history? Who was Abraham Lincoln?

Shirley—He's the man every company is making a picture of now.

Teacher—Are you familiar with the Civil War?

Shirley—Well, I saw part of the "Gone With the Wind" script.

Teacher—Can you name the 13 original States.

Shirley—Yes, but it always starts trouble out here. Everybody in Hollywood claims California is the only State that's original.

Teacher—That's just the screen authors' defense. Do you know anything about the Indian wars?

Shirley—Only that every studio is busy making at least one picture of 'em this season.

Teacher—Can you tell me anything about Napoleon?

Shirley—Nothing, except my folks say every picture company has at least one in the organization.

Teacher—You'll do in history, with a little help. How is your English?

Shirley—I speak it very well considering.

Teacher—Considering what?

Shirley—Considering I've spent most of my life in Hollywood.

Teacher—How about drawing? Do you draw well?

Shirley—It's only lately that Mickey Rooney outdrew me at the box-office.

Teacher—Who is Mickey Rooney?

Shirley—How I wish my manager could hear you ask that!

Teacher—How is your writing? I mean your penmanship?

Shirley—Do they write with pens out here?

Teacher—Why not?

Shirley—I thought it was all done with electric bulbs.

Teacher—Well, I can see your case requires study. I'll see you again tomorrow. This was just a little chat, understand?

Shirley—Yes, ma'am. Just a preview!

Cornerstone Laid for Thomas Jefferson Memorial Junior High

Fifteen-Hundred Students, parents and teachers stood by shivering in the gray afternoon yesterday as District officials and prominent Southwest citizens took part in the ceremony of laying the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Junior High School cornerstone at Eighth and H streets southwest.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, told the crowd that the preservation of democracy in the United States depends upon the schools.

"While the black clouds of dictatorship hang over Europe," she said, "we lay the cornerstone today of an institution dedicated to democracy. On the teaching in this and like institutions we pin our faith that democracy shall flourish in the United States forever"

"Through the instruction in this school may our young people learn that our freedom was bravely won and must be cherished and guarded. May they learn that they must be active, not passive workers for the democracy they enjoy. A school building such as this is our guarantee that 'government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.'"

She paid tribute to Harry S. Wender and Jack Schaffer, present and past presidents of the Southwest Citizen's Association, for their obtaining the appropriation for the new school building. The old building, at Sixth and D streets southwest, will be used until the new one is completed.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen told the group "southwest Washington finally has a temple of learning second to none in the District," "The acquisition of this monumental new school," he said, "has been a long, uphill struggle."

Recalling the times when he was a country boy in Virginia, "walking miles to go to the little one-story, one-room frame building," he said he hoped the boys and girls of southwest Washington will "value these privileges."

"My hope," he said, "is that the education, training and association they will get in this grand new building here will make them better, more loyal citizens of the greatest government on earth."

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the Woman's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association, placed the cornerstone. Mrs. Thorpe is also president of the board of trustees of the Barney Neighborhood House.

Farm Industry Ruled Subject To Trust Law

Wagon Drivers Union) and the Government's appeal, under the restriction of the criminal appeals act, does not present that question."

In ruling that farm marketing laws do not exempt production and marketing of agricultural products from the Sherman act, Hughes reversed lower court dismissal of indictments charging 57 corporations, individuals and organizations in the Chicago area with conspiracy to fix milk prices, control supply and suppress competition.

Speedy Trial Expected

The case will be remanded for trial. Justice Department officials, jubilant over the Government victory, indicated the Government will ask for the immediate arraignment of the defendants and an early trial.

In two other decisions, the court upheld the Government and sustained the right of two Federal agencies to take far-reaching action in the filed of labor relations.

In a unanimous opinion by Justice Roberts the court validated Labor Relations Board action in ordering the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. to "disestablish" an alleged company union, although no labor dispute had arisen and employes were "satisfied" with the union.

Another unanimous decision, by Justice Stone, ruled the Interstate Commerce Commission has the right to require that the economic interests of employes be protected in approving railroad leases. Specifically, the court said the ICC can require trustees of the Chicago Rock Island & Gulf Railroad to provide for 49 employes who would be discharged and 20 who would be transferred in a proposed reorganization.

Observers looked in vain for a dissent in any case from Justice McReynolds, lone conservative on the court since the death of Justice Butler. McReynolds was absent from the bench when the opinions were read.

Limits Agricultural Act

Chief Justice Hughes overruled the Federal District Court finding that the milk handlers were exempted from Sherman law compliance by agricultural marketing agreement act of 1937 and the 1922 Capper-Volstead act permitting farmers to organize to market their crops.

Hughes said the Sherman act is a broad enactment prohibiting unreasonable restraints upon interstate commerce, and monopolizations or attempts to monopolize, while the agricultural act is limited to particular transactions regulated by official action.

Hazen to Ask 'Block Timing' Study

arteries also will be included in the council's studies, Hazen declared. On certain through streets, Hazen felt, 30 miles was "not too fast." He observed that "most motorists drive that fast anyhow" when they have a clear way ahead.

From personal experience, the Commissioner said, he has found the present light-timing system "O. K. for normal traffic," but he felt that the timing fails to meet demands of rush-hour traffic.

He was not sure whether District traffic engineers could readily work out a program of "block" timing for peak-times and still use the present system for normal, midday traffic. He said, however, inquiries would be made and opinions presented to the advisory council.

The Commissioner's action followed a recent series of 10 articles in The Post, reporting results of an extensive survey on traffic lights and their relation to traffic delay and congestion. The stories advocated an increased speed limit on certain major streets and longer signal cycles during rush hours.

Hazen's decision to present the problem to his traffic advisory council also was in line with sentiments voiced by Post readers who responded to the series of stories.

"Hereafter, the orders of Mr. Van Duzer will be official, and not those of Howard Wentworth."

Indian Vanishing No Longer; Makes Plenty Wampum

"Lo, the poor and vanishing Indian" is increasing his numbers and finances, it was revealed yesterday in the annual report of John Collier, Commissioner for Indian Affairs, to Secretary of Interior Ickes.

The report said the Indian population in the last year jumped from 342,497 to 351,878, not counting the 39,000 Indian and Eskimo wards in Alaska. In fact, the Indians made the largest population gain of any group in the country.

The report said Indian cooperatives and companies were prospering in cattle and sheep raising, agriculture, salmon canning, dairy farming, oyster culture, and Indian crafts.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Would-Be Navy 'Drags' Are Advised to Read Booklet On Naval Academy Life Written by Midshipman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a frequent Naval Academy "drag," I dislike seeing the Regiment branded in the caustic manner of "Disgusted." Despite the uniform they wear, midshipmen cannot be typed as a species apart. So, even if there were justification for this girl's anger with the two middies whom she entertained at her parents' expense, there is none for extending her displeasure to include all midshipmen. Furthermore, her erstwhile guests probably had more cause for disillusionment than she, since her motives in entertaining the boys must have been as obvious to them, as is her frustrated desire for week-end bids to those who read her letter of complaint.

My experience with midshipmen has been entirely gratifying. I have found those I know to be thoughtful, pleasant and gracious, in the roles of guest and host. Among my treasures are several notes, some to me and some to my mother, sent by midshipmen whom we entertained at a house party.

The best advice I can offer to "Disgusted" and to all "drags" and potential "drags," is, first, to bear in mind that there is no essential difference between midshipmen and other young men of comparable age; and, secondly, to obtain (for 20 cents) a copy of a helpful little booklet called "The Drags' Handbook," which has just been published by the Naval Academy Magazine, The Log. Requests for this book of "sailing directions for drags," should be sent to The Editor, The Log, U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Written by a midshipmen, this booklet preserves throughout a tone of big brotherly helpfulness as it explains the academy background, restrictions and traditions which may well overcome one not accustomed to them. It is a treasure chest of pactical information, preparing a girl to be her poised best for any academy occasion.
Sincerely, D. W. D.

Woman Nearly 90 Comes to Our Defense

MY DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am old-fashioned and intend to remain so, hence the "Miss Haworth." You have been put in a position to give your own opinions when asked for them. I believe you give them honestly and fairly. If there are others who do not agree with you, it is not your fault.

In regard to whether insanity, epilepsy and other mental or nervous disorders are hereditary, it is my opinion that NOBODY KNOWS. When I was young, I wondered how one could know; one would have to live a lifetime to find out. Well, I have lived nearly fourscore years and ten and my observation has been that many, many times it has been proven that insanity of one form or other has been handed down or "visited upon children unto the third and fourth generations," according to the Biblical prophesy.

My father, two grandfathers, an uncle and now a nephew were all physicians. All believe that certain diseases which inevitably caused mental disorders were and are hereditary. Anyway, I have always believed in the slogan, "safety first." As for me and mine, I would not take any chances . . . My advice to the world is not to marry into any family with any strain of insanity closer than six generations back. God bless the wonderful work you are doing.
Yours sincerely. F. D. C.

The Subtle Corrosion Of Maternal Criticism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I can indeed feel for "Distracted Wife," whose letter appeared in your column recently, for I was one myself for many years, although it was not my huband's mother but my own who caused the trouble.

My husband never "stood up" to her and told her to leave our home, stop running our lives and magnifying his faults, because he was a quiet, shy young man who had been brought up to respect and give way to women (especially older ones) on the theory that they are wise and good. Besides, he knew that I loved her very much, as I was an only child and she a widow—the pretty, spoiled type of Southern woman, very proud of being sensitive, and so full of blue blood that she had hemophilia of the emotions on the slightest provocation.

Our marriage ended in divorce, of course, although not until 20 years had marched like Black Oxen over us. Recently, I married again; so happily, this time, that every aching wound seems now to have been a cup made to hold joy. But I know that in order to protect it there can be no half-way measures. Anyone who vitiates the atmosphere of one's home and one's love must be removed as far as possible, most especially anyone who has as much influence over one's emotions as one's mother.

I do not mean that one's responsibility toward them ceases. Far from it. One must do everything for them. In my case, I have established my mother as comfortably as I am able, in a small apartment where, surrounded by her own things, she can (if she will) lead a happy, interesting life . . . So the case rests, but for me, that is not enough. Even as I enjoy the happiness of my new marriage and the home which, for the first time, is free from the subtle corrosion of criticism and disapproval masquerading as sweet admonitions "for your own happiness, my child," I realize that I have only checked a blight, not cured it.

I long to do something which will awaken all self-pitying, miserable, jealous mothers-in-law to the enormity of their cruelty and the pitiful littleness of their vaunted "love." When I think of the husbands and wives who find their loyalties hopelessly torn, their most innocent actions frowned upon, their privacy invaded and the belief in their mate's superiority discounted and somehow discredited, I feel I can never rest until I have made every parent of married children stop and ask himself, in true humility, "What am I doing?"

Teachers 'Terl,' but New York Speech Gets 'Woise'n Woise'

New York, Dec. 4.

ONE OF THE prime puzzles to a newcomer to this town is its strange varieties of dialect. Why, even a resident of the Bronx needs an interpreter for a conversation with a Brooklynite, and Aunt Emma from Keokuk doesn't know what either one is talking about.

Alice Hughes

When I was a kid in school I was taught the line "The little boid sits on the coib and choips and choips and choips," as a horrible example of one sort of New York speech. I thought the teacher was kidding, but I learned better when I got here. For years I resolutely refused to believe that a resident of the great Borough of Brooklyn tends to pronounce "choice" and "voice" as "cherce" and "verce," but now I know he does. I hear this droll speechway nearly every day.

Naturally, horrified teachers in our higher schools do their best to fight down these quaint perversions, but it's a long and losing struggle, I find. No doubt the huge unassimilated foreign population here has a lot to do with it. They huddle in racial groups and pay no mind to proper English, if any. Out at City College there's a speech clinic run by Victor Fields to minister to incoming freshmen from local high schools, and he sadly tells me that the boys are actually getting woise.

Fields says that the boys from Queens, across the East River, are the best of the lot, but that the Lower East Side turns out high school graduates who wouldn't know proper English speech if they heard it on a choir of saxophones. Up in the Bronx the boys have trouble with the simple letters. Fields lays the blame on improper training in high school—but I think the truth is that the boys and girls here just don't give a rootin' toot, as long as they're understood by the other kids on the block. Ho hum. How about an erster stew at Gran Centrl?

JOAN CRAWFORD still seems anxious to do a play on Broadway this year, and is reading possible scripts. Joanie will be taking a big gamble—I don't think she has been on a stage since she was a chorus girl here a good many, well, some years back.

Sending of Christmas Cards Now Ruled by Etiquette

Name Signed in Colored Ink Gives Festive Touch; Printed or Engraved Signatures Also Proper; Family Greetings Are Out

NO MATTER how informal and spontaneous a Yuletide greeting you send a friend or acquaintance, the lofty head of etiquette rears its head to be considered. Much of the joy of sending seasonal salutations is spoiled for many people by the perplexity of figuring out bothersome do's and dont's attached to the subject of Christmas cards.

Cards individually signed by hand continue in favor. Writing the name boldly across the face of the card in colored ink of a shade predominating in the design is a clever innovation. However, signatures may be printed or engraved. It is esential though that the style of the lettering contrast sharply or either match with that of the card sentiment. Where printing is used, greetings and name in lock letters of gold, silver or a vivid color are a new note, or in white against a background of color.

Special Cards Now Generally Used

Special cards engraved with such a form as "With best wishes from Mr. and Mrs. James William Doe," now have come into general acceptance. However, the more correct form is to use the name first, since strictly speaking the titles Mr., Mrs. or Miss should never form part of a signature. And this naturally prohibits, in the strictest sense, the use of the calling card plate for engraved Christmas cards.

Informal cards with gay, friendly mesages for the immediate circle of friends and relatives may be signed either "The Jimmy Does," or, if the first names are used, either the husband's or wife's may come first. A good general rule is that the husband's name is placed first in engraving or prints, and the wife's name first if hand-written. If the child's name is included in the greeting, the husband's name automatically goes first.

The married business woman who uses her maiden name at the office should write her maiden name beneath her joint signature with her husband, or if she prefers, she may select separate cards for her business list, using her maiden name alone on them.

Address Cards To 'Mr. and Mrs.'

In sending cards to married persons, it is proper to address the envelope Mr. and Mrs. even though you know only one of them. The exception is in sending cards to a business acquaintance if the sender has not met the recipient's wife or to a business woman who uses her single name in the office. Cards of unmarried business acquaintances may be correctly addressed to the office, although it is considered a nice personal touch if they are directed to the home address.

Strict rules of etiquette demand a card for husband and wife and separate cards for other members of the family. It is permissible, however to send only one card to a household, providing the several names are written separately on the envelope. Cards are correctly sent to individuals or families in mourning, but the design should be keyed to the deeper significance of the Christmas day.

Another etiquette problem which continually creeps up is the Christmas card for the divorcee. Strictly, the divorcee uses her own family name in place of her husband's first name. However, many divorced women now use their own Christian names, with or without their former husband's surname. This simplifies things if the husband remarries.

Words of Caution About Spelling Names

As personal mesages the envelopes should be addressed by hand in ink. Particular care should be taken to verify the initials and spelling of the name. If there are two envelopes, the name and address are written in full only on the outer envelope. The inner envelope carries only the names and is left unsealed.

Practical modern usage also sanctions cards sent in unsealed envelopes, thus permitting them to travel through the mails at the third-class rate of 1½ cents.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

No-Pants Issue

IF AMERCICAN women are regimented into trousers, it will be over the dead body of Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League. The famous reformer at her press conference yesterday bitterly assailed the prediction of Elizabeth Hawes, designer, that women within a few years would be wearing trousers. She also announced that the league would throw its entire membership of "961,342½ intrepid women and one man" into a campaign to stop the pants-for-women movement.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The league's single male member is Prof. Byron Bysshe Aspic, noted esthete, collector and champion of womanhood, who now, according to Mrs. DeGoofey, is in New York directing the league campaign there to retain short skirts.

"I no sooner halt the movement to lengthen women's skirts," declared Mrs. DeGoofey, "than I find that subversive forces are working to imprison women in trousers. Now I shall defend women's right to show their legs as long as there is a single silk worm on the job."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey, I understand that the pants for women advocates say that display of the legs in short skirts is merely a feminine device to get attention from men," observed a writer from the Age of Reason.

"Can you tell me anything that's more of an attention getter—of the wrong kind—than a fat woman in pants?" reported Mrs. DeGoofey. "Or for that matter any woman over size 14 in pants?"

More Attention From Men Needed

Anyway, what is wrong with getting attention from men? I have always enjoyed the marked attention that men have shown me. And I maintain that we can get more favorable and more profitable attention from men by wearing short skirts than we can the assortment of baggy, tight, sloppy and hideous looking feminine pants that are bound to appear if this bifucrate movement gains ground."

"Do you expect it to gain ground, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked picture page editor.

"Frankly, I do not. If neither Dr. Mary Walker or Hollywood could popularize pants for women I don't see how anyone else can. However, I am taking no chances on nipping this thing in the bud."

"But would not trousers be better for women from the utility standpoint?" asked a science editor."

"Utility, bah!" was the reply. "What woman ever cared about utility in dress?"

"But didn't the short skirt come in as a measure of utility?" asked a writer of historical articles.

"No indeed. No greater fallacy ever existed. As Prof. Aspic has shown in his book 'Behavioristic Reactions of the 20's," the primary motive behind the flapper costume was exhibitionism. Tell me this—if the flappers put on knee-length skirts solely for practical reasons, why on earth didn't they wear cotton stockings and red flannels with them? However, understand, I am not decrying the flappers' motive. I have always been strongly against common sense in feminine dress."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a home economics editor, "if men prefer women simply and sensibly dressed——"

"Who says they prefer them that way?" interrupted the reformer.

"We-ll they say so themselves——"

Mrs. DeGoofey led the resulting outburst of laughter in which the feminine members of the press joined.

No Mink Coats Found Over Pants

"Tell me this," said the reformer, "how many women in sensible hats and natural colored finger nails will you find this minute in hotel dining rooms and cocktail lounges with men paying the bills? How many such women will you find wearing mink coats? Or on their way to Palm Beach?"

"But don't you think Mrs. DeGoofey that the sensibly dressed woman could really get just as far with men is she used her simple, natural charm?" asked an agony columnist.

"I think it would be much less exhausting and much safer to depend on the silk stockings and the nail polish," was the reply.

"You don't oppose sleeping pajamas for women do you Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a shopping columnist.

"I most certainly do! I consider them not only uncomfortable but unesthetic. Just imagine how ungraceful a woman would look in them descending a fire escape!"

"What about your method of campaign?" inquired a veteran leg man.

"I have not worked that out yet. But you can quote me as definitely announcing that I will make the no-pants-for-women issue one of the dominant planks of my 1940 platform?"

"Platform for what?" eagerly asked a political reporter.

Erect, Graceful Carriage Called Feminine Asset

Hollywood—Beauty lies in a graceful carriage, supple erect shoulders and a proud head. If you walk young, you'll look young.

Like a beautiful voice, a smooth walk is a feminine asset. A girl who bounces along, ambles or slouches stamps herself as lazy and careless.

Bette Davis, though not tall, gives the appearance of dignified height because she walks smoothly and forcefully. Little mincing steps denote fear, uncertainty or bashfulness. This is fine when playing a part. Bette can assume these attitudes when necessary, just as she assumes dramatic stature, literally and figuratively, in "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex."

Walk at all times as if you were carrying a basket on your head. Walk with a swinging movement from the hips, knees flexible but not too bent. Place the ball of the foot down just a second before the heel.

A high firm bosom is achieved by holding the shoulders back. Practice deep breathing. One fine exercise is to press the finger tips forcefully together while elbows are held high.

Cutting Diet on General Percentage Basis May Be Dangerous; Foods Vary in Value

USUALLY I string along with the doctors. I am always telling you that you should see your doctor before attempting to reduce, and that if you have more than 20 pounds to lose, it is only commonsense to have a medical check on heart, blood pressure, blood sugar and metabolism.

But two reducers write this week that they saw their doctors and were advised to "just eat 50 per cent less of everything." A third was told merely to "cut down on all meals." None of those suggestions is a safe way to remove any considerable amount of excess weight.

What do you think happens when you cut down to 50 per cent of your usual food intake? To begin with, we'll suppose that you are following an average diet . . . Now, it has been proved that on the average diet you get barely enough calcium, iron and vitamins to cover your needs. So if you were to cut down to half your usual fare you would be on a very poor diet indeed.

You Can't Store Vitamins

When you go on a reducing diet you still need the same amount of everything and you do not get along on less. The reason you are able to burn up the excess pounds is that you draw on stored fat for the dietary deficit. But an effective reserve of the protective elements is not stored. If the diet is deficient in minerals, vitamins or protein, you draw on vital tissues for them, and your resistance is lowered. On a poor diet you catch cold easily, your teeth decay, your hair loses its luster, and your nails split.

There are two safe ways to reduce. One is to follow a balanced 1,200 calorie menu. On the planned menu, you are sure of getting the food elements you need because they are given first place. The second way is to cut down on the nonessentials. These are: the fats—gravy, salad dressing, fried foods, excess cream; the sweets—sugars, jelly, rich desserts, candy; the starches—macaroni, rice, spaghetti, all excess breads and cereals.

Sometimes I think the doctors have helped to drive women to adopt faddy diets. When a woman goes to her doctor for a sensible reducing diet and he dismisses her with a wave of the hand and the assurance that she is healthy at whatever weight she happens to be . . . well, he can be sure of one thing: She will not "let well enough alone."

Nevertheless, I still want you to consult your doctor before trying to take off any great amount of avoirdupois.

Dr. Jones, Baptist Pastor, Dies at Home

Minister Filled Pulpit in Capital For 10 Years

The Rev. H. M. B. Jones, D. D., pastor of the Second Baptist Church, died early yesterday at his home, 1831 Massachusetts avenue southeast.

A native of Fredericksburg, Va., he had been pastor of the Second Baptist Church since 1929. Dr. Jones came to Washington from South Street Baptist Church, Portsmouth, Va., and also had been pastor of Scott Street Baptist Church, Baltimore.

A member of the ministerial education committee of the District Baptist Convention, Dr. Jones was educated at Richmond College, Va., and Crozier Theological Seminary, Pa. He received his doctorate in divinity from Northwestern Baptist University, Forth Worth, Tex.

During his pastorate here, more than 400 communicants were added to the rolls of the Second Baptist Church. Under his leadership the church also moved to its present structure at Seventeenth and East Capitol streets.

All meetings of church organizations have been canceled for the week, but regular services will be held Sunday, church officials said.

Dr. Jones is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dicie King Jones, of 1831 Massachusetts avenue southeast; a sister, Mrs. Laura Bowering, of Fredericksburg, Va., and two brothers, the Rev. Hampton Jones, of Waverly, Va., and Dr. Leonard Jones, of Hopewell, Va.

The body will lies in state at the Second Baptist Church from 9 a. m. untill 11 a. m., when funeral services will be held there by the Rev. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and the Rev. C. B. Austin, president of the District Baptist Convention. Special music will be sung by the church choir. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery, Baltimore.

Harlem Eagle Dove of Peace To Divine

Flier Offers to Pay Outraged 'Angel's' Claim on Heaven

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 4.—A throng of dusky Harlem "angels" jubilantly chanted "Sittin' at de Table of de Lord" today as they trooped out of the State supreme courtroom where the little bald man they called "God" appeared as defendant in a $4,476 equity suit brought by a disgruntled former disciple.

"Peace!" they shouted. "Ain't you glad?"

"Father Divine is God!" exulted others.

Their ecstacy arose from an offer by Col. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, 42, self-styled soldier-of-fortune, aviator and "Black Eagle of Harlem," to pay up $12,500 cash for an out-of-court settlement of claims totaling $17,000 against Father Divine.

Julian explained he made the offer to spare the cult leader from being made what he described as "the target of a reflection on the Negro race."

Supreme Court Justice Benedict E. Dineen recessed the case until tomorrow morning to give counsel for both sides a chance to talk it over.

The Harlem Messiah himself never batted an eye as the chief complainant, Mrs. Verinda Brown, 52, a West Indian, glared in his direction and asked that the myriad properties of Father Divine's "peace" movement be placed in receivership and sold, with the proceeds distributed among his followers.

Mrs. Brown testified the cult leader often talked about "cosmic forces" and "the millions, the trillions, the quadrillions and I don't know how much more money he had in his heavenly treasury."

The witness said it was a far less cheerful story, however, when she wanted to get her money out of the "heavenly treasury." She couldn't get a nickel back, she said.

43 Americans Leave Finland

The State Department announced last night that the steamship Castleholm, bearing 43 Americans and 10 non-American members of the United States staff at Helsinki, sailed this afternoon from Abo, Finland, for Stockholm, Sweden.

H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, American Minister to Finland, cabled the Department the vessel is expected to dock at Stockholm tomorrow afternoon.

D. C. Street Cars Slower Than in 1936

PUC Report Urges Faster Operation To Improve Service

Despite the growing use of streamlined street cars, the average speed of operation of all Washington trolleys is slower than the average at the beginning of 1936, the Public Utilities Commission disclosed yesterday.

Reviewing the developments in mass transportation for 1938 in its annual report, the commission noted that there has been a slight increase in the average speed since 1936, but it still is below the 10-mile rate of that period. Last year it was 8.55 miles per hour.

The commission explained that the reason for this sudden drop was the discontinuance in 1936 of many suburban trolley lines and the substitution of buses.

"A higher speed of operation is desirable," the report stated, "because of better service rendered and on account of the economies that may be effected."

The commission noted that the daily bus passenger traffic increased from 40,000 in 1934 to between 150,000 and 170,000 in 1938. Rail passengers decreased from 390,000 in 1934 to 340,000 in 1938.

The total passenger increase in the same period was from 450,000 to 515,000 daily.

The report disclosed a decrease in the number of taxicabs licensed as of January 1. The number in 1938 was 4,239 and in 1939 it was 3,869.

Communist Held In Passport Fraud

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Welnel Warszower, financial secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today for fraudulent use of a passport.

Earlier the trial of Earl Browder, the party's general secretary, on a similar charge was postponed two weeks.

Troubles of Newcomer Related by Mrs. Borah

Luncheon Guests Listen to Anecdote From Rich Store of Senator's Wife; Mrs. Caldwell Hostess at Charming Home

By Hope Ridings Miller

IF THERE'S ANYBODY who really should write a book about Washington, it's Mrs. William E. Borah—"Little Borah" to her shoals of friends—who has collected some rare experiences during her three decades as a Capital hostess and can relate them in a manner that invariably makes her audience cry for more.

"When you're around here over thirty years, you can't help picking up a few things," she modestly observed yesterday at a small luncheon where she had just told of the cool reception she had on her first call in Washington.

She had just come to town from Idaho; had a brand-new tailored suit, and an expansive desire to do everything she could to help her husband. Accordingly, she got down the Congressional directory; made a list of important hostesses and started out on her rounds. She arrived at the first house promptly at 4 p. m. and was told by the butler, "Madam never receives until 5 o'clock."

Arriving at the second house a quarter of an hour later, she found her hostess still entertaining luncheon guests. A very brief and frigid greeting ensued; the hostess then promptly forgot Mrs. Borah, and the latter soon slipped away.

Overwhelming Cordiality Comes Later

But wait—there's another chapter. A couple of days later, the erstwhile hostess ran into Mrs. Borah again. "Why on earth didn't you tell me the other day that you are the wife of the new Senator from Idaho," she asked, all smiles and with a warmth unlike any Mrs. Borah had yet encountered in Washington.

"I was announced," Mrs. Borah replied.

"Yes, I know; but my footman is a foreigner, and I can't understand him half the time. Why, oh why, didn't you make yourself known?"

The cordiality of the new "friend" overflowed into a shower of invitations after that, and although none was accepted, Mrs. Borah soon learned that the woman's husband was very much interested in having a certain bill passed in Congress.

"I never went to her house again," Mrs. Borah went on, "and I told Billy that no matter how good that bill was, he was not to vote for it."

"Did he?" somebody at yesterday's luncheon table asked. "He probably did. I don't know. But it did me good just the same to state my position," Mrs. Borah said in conclusion.

The luncheon, incidentally, was the first one given by Mrs. Irene Caldwell in her charming little house on Hall place. The place is one of the coziest I've seen in a long while. Ivory and blue furnishings against soft blue walls and ivory draperies make the living room look like something out of a picture book. The blue and ivory note is also carried out in the dining room where twelve guests were seated at an oval table.

Tall, yellow tapers, sprouting from a huge bunch of silver grapes, centered the table and blended with the yellow damask that blended with the china. And, of course, anybody who has ever been to Irene Caldwell's house for any meal, knows the menu was fit for a queen.

Table talk turned on a variety of topics; and as is the usual thing in Washington, a couple of bright remarks making the rounds recently were hauled out and repeated for the benefit of those who hadn't heard them before. One, for example, had to do with a hairdresser's observation about Germany's and Russia's heads of government. "Well, goodness knows, Hitler is bad enough," said the operator as she fiercely twirled a curl over her comb, "but that Stallion is a perfect terror!"

Table talk after the luncheon went on, and on, until some of us simply had to tear ourselves away. Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Borah (who ought to write a book) were the ranking guests. Others in the pleasant company included Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. George Romney, Mrs. Martin Codel, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary and Mrs. Tom Stokes.

Perhaps You Haven't Heard That:

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, is planning a dinner for December 15 and inviting all the Oxonians in Washington . . . There'll be about seventy in the group, many of whom were Rhodes scholars and met the Ambassador when he was serving as secretary of the Rhodes Trust . . . Among those who will attend the dinner are Stanley K. Hornbeck, Charles D. Mahaffie of the Interstate Commerce Commission; Erwin Canham, Ernest K. Lindley and Raymond Brandt.

Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri, accompanied by Mrs. Stark, will arrive in Washington Wednesday, and will stay over the week-end for the round of Gridiron festivities . . . Mrs. D. Worth Clark will entertain at a luncheon on Thursday, December 14, in honor of Mrs. Raymond Clapper . . .

And did you know—that the scholarly Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, keeps a diary that already has filled sixty volumes?

Engagement Made Known

Bachrach.

Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts have announced the engagement of their niece, Miss Dorothy Letts, to O. R. McGuire, jr., son of Col. and Mrs. O. R. McGuire, of this city and Arlington, Va. The bride-elect made her debut here several seasons ago. She was graduated from the Connecticut College for Women. Mr. McGuire, who is in private practice here, was graduated from the University of Virginia and George Washington Law School

Roosevelts to Hold Family Reunion in Christmas Holidays

All Children But Elliott and James To Be Here; Three Separate Parties Planned For Grandchildren of Varying Ages

Like most Americans, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will devote the Christmas holidays to a family reunion. With them will be all their children except Elliott and James, and several grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, of Seattle, will bring their infant son, John Roosevelt Boettiger, and Mrs. Boettiger's son and daughter, Curtis and Eleanor Dall. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., will be accompanied by their young son, Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d, and John Roosevelt will bring with him his wife, the former Miss Anne Lindsay Clark.

It is expected little John Boettiger will be christened at a ceremony in the state suite of the White House sometime during his parents' stay here. His cousin, little Franklin Roosevelt, was baptized at the Executive Mansion last January.

Instead of their customary children's party at the White House around Christmas, Mrs. Roosevelt will have three separate ones this year, as the grandchildren are of varying ages. There will be no party for the grown-up Roosevelts at Christmas, but possibly they will celebrate on New Year's Eve.

The customary party for the members of the office staff will be held Friday morning, December 22, and members of the household staff and their children will be feted the next afternoon, December 23.

Mrs. Roosevelt lunched yesterday as the guest of Mrs. Wilson Brown, wife of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy, after addressing wives and officers stationed there. From Annapolis she went to Philadelphia, where last night she received the Humanitarian award from the Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Roosevelt will return today and in the afternoon will attend a bazaar for the benefit of Czecho-Slovak refugees. Thursday and Friday she will spend in New York but will return in time for the party she will give Saturday night at the White House for the Gridiron Widows.

Mrs.. Tuckerman Entertains for Yolanda Alfaro

In honor of Miss Yolanda Alfaro, one of the season's debutantes, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton.

Her guests included Mrs. Maurice Broderick, Mrs. Robert Knowlton, Mrs. Thomas Adams, and the Misses Eleanor, Cecilia and Marie vom Rath, Patricia Procknik, Stellita Stapleton, Ellen Hewes, Flowerree, Sheila Brodrick, Peggy Townsend, Patricia Henry, Joan Ellett, Dita Davis and Berenice Merchant.

Many of the guests remained through the afternoon to assist Mrs. Tuckerman with the Near East bazaar, which opened yesterday and will continue for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ansel Pendar Will Live Here After Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ansel Pendar are on their wedding trip and will be at home at 1600 Twenty-eighth street upon their return.

The marriage of the former Miss Carolyn Pitts Duffield, daughter of Mrs. Pitts Duffield, of New York and Paris, took place Saturday in the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, with the Rev. Thomas L. Graham officiating.

Mr. Pendar, who is the son of Mrs. Oliver S. Pendar, of New York, is in the office of tthe General Counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a beige dress and carried a prayerbook. James C. Cooley 2d, of New York, was best man.

The bride attended Mrs. Randall-MacIver's School in New York and also studied at the Sorbonne in Paris. On the maternal side she is granddaughter of the late Justice McKenna of the Supreme Court of the United States. On her paternal side she is granddaughter of the late Gen. Duffield, of Detroit, and a descendant of Mrs. Isabella Graham, who with Mrs. Alexander Hamilton founded the first orphan asylum in New York. She is a member of the Order of Colonial Governors.

Mr. Pendar attended St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., and later Harvard College, where he was a member of the A. D. and Hasty Pudding Clubs. He was graduated in the class of 1927. After graduating from the Harvard Law School he practiced law in New York. His father was an early settler of Dakota Territory and lived for the greater part of his life in Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Junior League Speakers Wind Up Season

Would-Be Orators Have Hilarious Time at Luncheon

Junior Leaguers who enrolled in their organization's first course in public speaking, gathered yesterday for a hilarious final meeting and luncheon, during which each was called on to make an "entertaining speech." The subjects ranged from "Husbands" to "Bad Moments at Table," and judging from the laughter in their private dining room in a local restaurant, all did credit to their teacher, Mrs. Hugh Butler.

Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the educational committee of the league, under the auspices of which the course has been carried out, presided at the luncheon. Afterwards the members voted on each other's ability, with the prize for the greatest improvement going to Miss Frances Carter, and second place a tie between Mrs. Charles Baker and Mrs. William Calhoun Stirling. The best speaker was judged Mrs. George Maurice Morris, with Mrs. Chase and Mrs. Lewis Clark runners-up.

Members of the class present at the luncheon were Miss Cecil Jones, president of the league; Mrs. P. Landon Banfield, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Mrs. Daniel Borden Mrs. Seldon Chapin, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Mrs. Eberhart Haynes, Mrs. B. Lowndes Jackson, Mrs. David Karrick, Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, Mrs. William A. Morgan and Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant.

The class presented Mrs. Butler with a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Gould Leases Home

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, of Havana and Newport, R. I., has leased the home of Princess Burhaneddin on McGill Terrace and will spend the winter in Washington. Prince and Princess Burhaneddin will go to New York, where they have taken an apartment.

Mrs. Gould is among the boxholders for the series of morning musicales sponsored annually by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend.

Returning in time to occupy a box at the first, on Monday, is Mrs. Lewis Ellery, of Bradford, Pa., former resident of Washington. Mrs. Ellery will be at the Mayflower for several weeks.

Miss Belle Gurnee, who recently returned for the season, will share a box at the concerts with Mrs. Harry Covington, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, and Mrs. Price Whitaker. Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth is among the boxholders. Others include Mrs. Walter Schoellkopf, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Paul Bastedo and Mrs. George T. Marye.

Lina Tagliughi, American singer who made her debut in this country this year, and Egon Petri, pianist, will start in Monday's musicale.

Record Turnout Of Society Greets Theater Guild Play

The Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, a playwright himself, was in the audience last night for the first Washington performance of Paul Vincent Carroll's "The White Steed" at the National Theater. Mrs. Brennan accompanied her husband, and like him, voiced her delight in the play, which is set in Ireland and portrays some choice characters.

Virtually all regular "first nighters" and a sizable number of other notables were in their seats when the curtain went up on the drama that is the final one of the preholiday season for the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society. Among those seen in the crowd were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed who were in the box party given by Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woodward, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., Maj. Horace Smith, Mrs. Emory Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Carolos del Mar, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sim Lee.

Senorita Mercedes Madrazo, of Havana, who recently returned from New York for a second Washington visit this season, arrived at the play theater with George Abell. Later, he gathered in a few friends at his apartment for a post-theater party. In the company were Baronne de Bodsico, Dr. Eduardo Salazar, of the Ecuador Embassy; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Sidney Taliaferro, Mrs. Samuel Conner and several others. Senorita Madrazo is a house guest of Mrs. George Grant Mason.

Also Mrs. Samuel Conner, Mr. and Mrs. Metcalfe Walling, Eugene O'Dunne, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stansbury and several others.

Prof. Deibert To Give Tea Today

Dr. Julian Huxley Almost Meets Susie The Orangutan, in a Belligerent Mood

Two distinguished strollers through the Zoo on Sunday afternoon were Director Dr. William Mann and British scientist Dr. Julian Huxley, brother of writer Aldous. Dr. Mann took Huxley on a specially conducted tour during which they just managed to miss the incident of Susie, the Orangutan, by a few minutes. The Manns visited the Huxleys at their home in England several years ago.

If you want to make a hit with the director of our zoo, just give him a kitchen gadget for Christmas. A skilled cook and gourmet, Dr. Mann already has every kind of corkscrew and can opener invented. On his trip to South America last year he personally went to the kitchen and made the acquaintance of the chef in every hotel and tavern where he dined.

Dr. Mann, who knows as many celebrated personalities as anyone in Washington, likes to mingle all kinds of people at his parties. At a typical gathering you are apt to meet the man who feeds the lions at the zoo, a Supreme Court justice, Alexander Woollcott and a down-at-heels photographer.

MOST EUPHONIOUS names among children of the Diplomatic Corps are Parvin and Parviz, children of the Secretary of the Iranian Legation and Mme. Davallou, and Julietta and Jacinto, son and daughter of the Venezuelan Counselor and Senora de Fombona-Pachano. Like many of the youngest members of the Diplomatic Corps, they are busy rehearsing speeches which they will give soon at the annual International Children's Broadcast. Despite the conspicuous absence of peace and good-will in Europe today, the diplomatic children of every nation, from Soviets to Japanese to Finnish to German, are being asked to participate in this event, when through an N. B. C. short-wave hook-up they send greetings of the season to the children of other lands. As many of the youngsters wear the costumes of their homelands, the scene is always a very colorful one. They broadcast first in their native language and then the messages are translated into English.

Two years ago when some youngsters from Japanese diplomatic circles broadcast what amounted to a plea for peace, some of the parents present could not repress undiplomatic snickers of surprise.

Parvin and Parviz speak not only English, but German, French and Arabic.

MISS JANET FISH'S nephews, nieces, sisters and cousins were all assisting at the tea she gave over the week-end in honor of one niece, Miss Patricia Cutler, of New York, and Mrs. William Lawrence Breese, jr., the former Miss Nora Magee. Mr. Breese is a nephew of the hostess. The party took place at the Sulgrave Club, and a stringed orchestra in the background and two enormous punch bowls were among the attractions.

Seen here and there: Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Stanley Reed, who are among the most sociable of the justices' wives; Mrs. Truxtun Beale, in a gray outfit, chinchilla trimmed; Mrs. John Cutler, mother of Miss Cutler, chatting with Donna Julia Brambilla and Mr. Breese; Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, in a smart beige wool suit with a big lynx collar; Mrs. Chandler Hale, Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Miss Marian Trumbull, and dozens of others, ranging in age from young Hamilton Fish, jr., on up.

ONE OF THE smart Connecticut avenue restaurants now has a television music machine installed so that lunchers can listen in to strains of music coming from Thomas Circle over telephone wires. The maitre d'hotel tells us that television sets in New York restaurants are all the rage, but that so far there are only one or two in Washington.

Glimpsed lunching and listening yesterday were Mr. Charles McNary, who recently joined the Senator in Washington, where with other Congressional leaders he is being kept by the President because of the international situation, and the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and pretty young Senora de Gazitua with a party of colleagues.

LUNCHING with relatives at a big round table were Count and Countess de Gramont, of the French Embassy. They were supposed to sail for France last month, but after being wined and dined at an endless round of farewell parties were ordered to stay here. However, Count de Gramont, who still insists on joining the French army, hopes to sail early in January.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain tomorrow at luncheon for wives of members of the United States Supreme Court.

Brig. Gen. John Philip Hill has returned to him home at Newport after spending the holidays in New Hampshire with his brother, Capt. Elkins Clayton Hill, U. S. A., retired.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and Mrs. Freeman are at Mayfair House in New York.

Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, daughter of Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Pamela Tower, daughter of Mrs. G. Macculoch Miller, at their house in Aiken, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Fernand R. Tourtois have with them at the Wardman Park their daughter, Mrs. H. A Alker, jr., of Port Washington, Long Island, who is here for a brief visit.

Stanley Carrolls Go to Florida for Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley J. Carroll are spending their honeymoon at Miami Beach, Fla. They were married in Fredericksburg, Va., November 21. They are expected to return to Washington within three weeks to make their home.

Mrs. Carroll is the former Miss Marguerite Nordstrom. She is the daughter of Mrs. Isadore Nordstrom and Lieut. Comdr. Nordstrom, U. S. N. Mr. Carroll is connected with the Washington bureau of International News Service.

Caberos Honor Son With Party

The Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero entertained at an informal party yesterday afternoon in honor of their son, Alberto Cabero, jr., who was celebrating his birthday. It was a small family affair with members of the staff present.

Very shortly Senor Cabero, who is a mining engineer, will leave for Chicago to study various processes of mining. His wife and their daughter will remain at the Embassy until he returns.

Music Enlivens The Holcombs' At Home

Marine Band Orchestra Plays for Guests of Commandant and Wife

By Elizabeth Henney

The red-coated Marine band orchestra filled the house with gay music between the hours of five and seven yesterday afternoon, when the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb entertained at an at home in their quarters at the Marine Barracks.

Receiving in the drawing room, Mrs. Holcomb was gowned in a tea length model, fashioned with a flowing skirt of black crepe and a bodice of red and gold figured lame. To her shoulder was pinned a corsage of orchids and she wore crystal earrings.

Guests wandered through the conservatory, a second drawing room where the orchestra, complete with harp and soloist, presented gay tunes, and on into the dining room. The tea table, all in white, was centered with a silver bowl filled with white pompons. White tapers filled the elaborate silver candelabra at either end of the table.

Several Assist At Tea Table

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Harry Huse, wearing brown velvet with matching accessories and a sable stole; Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, smartly gowned in black with a cluster of yellow centered daisies at the shoulder and a small black cloche hat; Mrs. Holland M. Smith and Mrs. James M. Helm.

Also assisting were Mrs. Henry Larsen, who wore a gay frock of sienna red with black accessories and a silver fox cape; Mrs. Floyd L. Leech, Mrs. Thomas G. Gale, Mrs. William C. James, Mrs. C. B. Cates, Mrs. Frank Whitehead, Mrs. Robert Blake, Mrs. S. C. Cumming and Mrs. George C. Hamner. Mrs. Jack Juhan, wife of Capt. Juhan, aide to Gen. Holcomb, was in general charge during the afternoon.

Many Stop In During Afternoon

Quite a contingent of residential Washington stopped in during the afternoon, including Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, accompanied by their son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. R. H. Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Meem; the Misses Patten, Mrs. George Barnett, looking chic in black with a wide pearl and mother-of-pearl collarette at the high neckline of her frock; Charles Mason Remey and Miss Margaret Delano Gage.

Also noted were Vice Admiral Huse, Real Admiral Alexander H. Van Keuren; Col. and Mrs. William Rupertus, she in lipstick red with black accessories; Col. and Mrs. Charles T. Brooks, the latter wearing a matching ensemble of dubonnet; Mme. Abhibal Rajamaitri, wife of the Minister of Thailand; Miss Lydia Loring and many more.

League Asks Child Welfare Fund

$243,000 Is Sought For Recommendations Of Kepecs Report

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Representatives of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters today will appear before the budget committee to ask an appropriation of $243,000, completing the amount required to carry out the recommendation of the Kepecs report for child welfare service in Washington.

Yesterday, Mrs. Spencer Gordon, chairman of the child welfare committee of the Board of Public Welfare, address the child welfare department of the league at the Y. W. C. A., outlining the broadened program undertaken with the $37,000 appropriation already made.

"We are getting a good start," she said, "but nothing startling in the way of improvement can be expected without provision for all needs. The case load is still far above that in other cities of comparable size."

Red Tape Blamed For Delaying Staff

On August 7, said Mrs. Gordon, new workers were requested under the new appropriation, $30,000 of which has been applied to the setting up a new protective service. Not until November 18 were they available, due to red tape. The new unit includes a chief, a supervisor, ten field workers and three stenographers.

This staff will carrry on preventive work in an effort to keep the family together and the child in his own home, if possible.

This has great value, she pointed out, both in the lives of the individuals concerned and as a saving to the community. The whole aim of the program is to correct conditions before they become so bad that an institution—the most expensive last resort—is the only answer.

The additional $7,000 of the $37,000 is being used for the well-established staff of the Child Welfare Division of the Board of Public Welfare. It has made possible reclassification of the supervisor of home finding, as well as of four field workers supervising wards in foster homes. These are now obtained from the civil service register. It also provides for three new field workers and releases for this service two of the original staff who formerly handled the work now taken over by the protective service unit.

More Foster Homes Held Important

Mrs. Gordon emphasized the importance of locating more foster homes and supervising them adequately. A maximum allowance of $25 for each child is needed, she said, as on the present basis, with a maximum of $21.50 a month and an average of $19.50, it is difficult to get desirable foster homes. Children are provided foster home care rather than committed to institutions whenever possible.

Mrs. Gordon said the board of public welfare hopes to obtain a special fund to provide a worker who would co-ordinate the work of institutions to which children under its jurisdiction are committed. Such a worker would demonstrate the value of a full-time co-ordinator for the program, she said, such as the Kepecs report recommends.

Mrs. Gordon said also that the board wants the power to keep under its care for longer than one week, dependent or neglected children who in many cases would not need to be committed to the Juvenile Court. This does not apply to delinquent children. The board often is able to safeguard maladjusted children and save them from delinquency by careful study of their surroundings and corrective measures, she said.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, who preceded Mrs. Max O. Lorenz as president of the league, spoke at the luncheon which followed yesterday morning's meeting giving the background of the survey which resulted in the Kepecs report, adopted by the citizens' advisory committee.

Mrs. Sholar Addresses Crittenton Home Group

Mrs. Virginia Sholar, recreational director of the Y. W. C. A., addressed the meeting of the big sisters of Florence Crittenton Home yesterday at the home of Mrs. C. J. Riggall, on Beechwood drive. She described the study courses and recreational activities at the "Y. W." and told the members of the group that they might bring girls from the home to any of the study courses.

Luncheon was served with Mrs. John E. Chase and Mrs. Harold Anderson assisting the hostess.

The Crittenton Home Board will meet for luncheon at the home Friday, with Mrs. J. C. Freeland, presiding.

Delphian Units Hear of Perils In War Zone

Mrs. Lowdermilk Describes European Trip With Husband

Adventures on a 26,000-mile motor trip around the Mediterranean were described yesterday by Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk, in an address at the first "quarterly" meeting held by the Delphian chapters of the District this season. With Dr. Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the soil conservation service of the Department of Agriculture, she returned November 7 from a journey which took them into danger zones in Europe and to the Near East.

They escaped from Iraq when a mob, aroused by German propaganda which blamed the assassination of their king on the British, killed the British consul and burned the consulate. They were in Bagdad when the Arabs were working themselves into an anti-foreign frenzy over treatment of Arabs in Syria. In Palestine, the British government provided an armored car and an escort for Dr. Lowdermilk while he took pictures. His trip was for studying the older lands.

In North Africa, they were among the first to cross the Lybian Desert on the 1,500-mile highway built by Mussolini. Il Duce used 1,200 men and constructed it in ten months. For 400 miles, in one portion, there is not a turn. Mrs. Lowdermilk also described Mussolini's reclamation of the Pontine marshes, which baffled Romans since the Caesars. He organized workmen, and, with military precision, dealt with the malarial mosquitos like an enemy army, she said.

The Lowdermilks entered Europe at the time of Munich and competed on the highways with mobilizing troops. Returning from Syria aboard the Excambion, an American freighter, they sighted the empty lifeboats and debris of the Ledbury a few hours after she had been torpedoed 80 miles off Gibraltar and twice were looked over by a submarine.

Mrs. H. R. Norton, president of the National Capital chapter, presided at yesterday's meeting at 2400 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Verane Gregg was the soprano solist, accompanied by Mrs. D. A. Merritt.

Quota Clubs Plan War Aid

Plans for helping quota clubs in Canada and Australia turn their service to the aid of their countries in the war emergency will be discussed today by the executive board of Quota Club International in midyear session at the Mayflower Hotel. Among officers meeting with Mrs. Constance Wardle, the president, who is here from Providence, R. I., will be Mrs. Eva Leger, of Saskatoon, Canada, third vice president, who will arrive this morning.

Already the Canadian clubs are sponsoring benefits for the Red Cross and doing Red Cross work of various kinds. All this, said Mrs. Wardle, is in line with the international club's service program.

Reports of each of the international chairmen on the organization's five objectives will be submitted for approval of the board and its decisions will determine the work for the year.

Plans will be discussed for observance of the twenty-first anniversary of Quota International in February, when friendship dinners will be held by all of the clubs. Other women's service organizations will be asked to join in the events and two of the organization's five objectives will be carried out. One will be the extension of friendship and the other the recognition of the achievements of women. These also will be emphasized in the Quotarian Magazine, of which Miss Gwladys Jones is editor.

Cultus Club to Meet

The Cultus Club will meet today at 1 o'clock at Tilden Gardens. Mrs. C. K. Berryman will read a paper on "Famous People I Have Known."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches; rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

8 and 40 Does Things Up Red and White At Dance Honoring 'Ellen Lou' Warren

WHEN the 8 and 40 does things, it does them up—no, not "brown," but red and white, which is better.

Saturday night, at the banquet and dance honoring "Ellen Lou" Warren, of the D. C. salon, who is the new national chapeau, every detail was perfectly planned and carried out. It was at the Carlton Hotel where even the red draperies and white walls of the ballroom met the requirements of the color scheme. The tables were decorated with red and white carnations and ballons, and lighted with red candles, including miniature ones at each place. The place cards, made by Alberta Lacey, were little red chapeaux, with the 8 and 40 insignia on them, and completing the picture were the white gowns, red capes and white chapeaux with white feathers, worn by the 8 and 40 members, who comprised a majority of those attending the party. Of course there were also the men from the 40 and 8, to which the women's organization is an auxiliary, and these wore their blue uniforms resplendent with gold braid.

Mrs. Edith P. Landvoigt, chapeau of the D. C. department, presided at the banquet, and general arangements were in charge of Mrs. Helen McCabe.

One of those on the committee assisting was Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, who several years ago brought distinction to the local salon as the first of its members elected national chapeau.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans' Administration; Mrs. Hines and Isaac Gans, known as Washington's most beloved private citizen, were distinguished guests—and Mr. Gans broke his rule of going home at 10 o'clock. Interested in the program from beginning to end, he remained until its close at 10:30.

Rose Townsend, a coworker of "Ellen Lou's" in the Treasury Department, wrote the words for a song in tribute to her, which was sung by a group of 8 and 40 members as they presented her American beauty roses.

RICH HARVEST—The annual donation day of the Methodist Home for the Aged last Friday, was one of the largest ever held by the Washington and nearby Maryland churches for the benefit of the home. Practically every church was represented by generous contributions of canned goods, staple groceries and fruits and vegetables, promising a season of plenty for the 63 members of the home family.

The donation day is one of the happiest days of the year for the residents there because they always have an important part in preparations for it, conduct a booth for the sale of fancy work, and have opportunity to greet their friends from all parts of the city, who gather for the reception and program.

Women Hear Lusk Assail Hidden Taxes

Taxpayers' Chief Addresses Meeting Of Republicans

The present hocus-pocus of concealing taxes must cease, Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, told the League of Republican Women at their December meeting yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower. Not until the low-income man sees the taxes he is paying will the clamor for bigger outlays be stilled, he declared.

"The tax burden of Americans stands little chance of being materially reduced," said Mr. Lusk, "until the little fellow, who earns $1,000 or $2,000, pays his taxes in cold cash as do those of larger incomes. The low-income man pays taxes, plenty of them, but because he does not see the tax he believes the other fellow carries the load. When politicians have the courage to tax everybody openly and frankly the clamor that goes up for bigger outlays, which are often handouts, to pressure groups, will largely subside.

"In Washington the little fellow pays on the average around $128 in taxes which can be directly traced. This equals about 6 per cent of his income. Add the invisible items and at least 15 to 20 per cent of all he makes goes for taxes. He works one day in five for the Government. In some cities the direct tax burden on a $2,000 man is over $250 a year. Millions of our people work one day in four for the Government and don't know it. When these millions understand that there are 58 taxes on a loaf of bread, 345 on an automobile and 63 on a suit of clothes, that the tax on a shirt equals 20 per cent of its cost, 33 per cent on drugs and 18 per cent on sugar, when the average working man begins to know these facts the efforts of pressure groups and politicians to take an increasingly larger part of everybody's earnings may be stopped.

"Today a quarter out of every dollar of incomes goes for taxes; ten years ago it was less than 13 cents."

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, introduced Mr. Lusk. She also presided at the board meeting in the morning at which Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor was elected to succeed the late Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, as first vice president of the league.

Thursday, at the luncheon, at headquarters, 1301 Seventeenth street, Mrs. Gann will have as her guest Mrs. Virginia White Speel. Mrs. Speel, national committee woman for the District and founder and first president of the league, will speak informally.

Nolen Urges Downtown Parking Ban

He Suggests Resting Of Autos Should Be Confined to Nearby Residential Areas

The banning of automobile parking in downtown streets and the suggestion that all parking be confined to residential areas fringing the downtown area, were advocated yesterday by John Nolen, jr., at a meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association at the Mayflower Hotel. He cited Dupont circle as a location where an underpass was "vitally important."

Widening of streets in the northwest area, Nolen said, was in many instances advisable. But, he declared, widened pavements tend to push out a residential community and make room for the introduction of shops."

The group discussed possible park improvements in Dupont circle stating that while the organization was in favor of better playgrounds, "the circle has lost much of its attractiveness because it is used as a play spot." A resolution was adopted opposing an application for a liquor license in the 1300 block of Connecticut avenue.

Takoma Park Citizens

Opposition to the Seal plan for the reorganization of the District government was voted last night by the Takoma Park Citizens Association.

The organization, meeting in Takoma Park Elementary School, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street northwest, resolved "there can be no real reorganization of the municipal government until Congress grants rights of suffrage and national representation to the people of the District of Columbia."

Legislative power, "particularly as to taxation," should not be exercised by any appointive body, the group voted.

The association went on record that all proposed plans for District reorganization are defective, because they try to unify in the municipal government the powers belonging to Congress and the people of the city.

During the session, plans were laid for the annual Christmas party, December 2, at Takoma Park Playground, Fourth and Van Buren streets northwest. The Manor Park Citizens Association has been invited ot join in the celebration.

Forest Hill Citizens

The reason for the slowness of the new District recreation setup has been "the laying of a solid foundation for work," Miss Sybil Baker, director of the Community Center, said last night at a meeting of the Forest Hills Citizens Association. The meeting was held at the Ben W. Murch School.

Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the District Mothers Health Association, spoke on the work of the association, and advocated parents having "the number of children they can raise who will be an asset and not a liability to the community."

The results of the Commissioners' hearing on reorganization of the District government was reported by the legislative committee.

In an open discussion the group criticized the Board of Zoning for "inconsideration" of its wishes in regulations in the area.

National Gateway

A. D. Calvert, president of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, commended the work of associations in the Northeast and urged emphasis on "real estate development" in the section, at a meeting of the National Gateway Citizens Association at the Church of Christ. Results of hearings on the reorganization plan were referred to the legislative committee.

In requesting a stop light at Bladensburg road and Channing street northeast, the group suggested that some cheaper method of erecting traffic lights be found. Improvement of Franklin street between Twenty-eighth and Thirtieth streets northeast was requested.

Progressive Citizens

Lieut. Albert I. Bullock, of the Third Precinct, spoke on cooperation between police and citizens at a meeting of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown at the Curtis School. A report on the results of the Seal plan hearing was read by the legislative committee.

A suggestion for beautification of city streets was visualized, with the suggestion that more trash containers be placed in public. Following a discussion of public nuisance regulations, the association went on record as requesting a red light at Wisconsin avenue and H street northwest.

Manor Park Citizens

The Manor Park Citizens Association last night voted approval of the community club programs for adolescents being held at the Paul Junior High School, Fifth and Oglethorpe streets northwest, under sponsorship of the District recreational organization.

The group voted to join with the Takoma Park Citizens Association in a Christmas party to be held at the Takoma Park Playground, Fourth and Varnum streets northwest.

Arthur Kriemelmeyer was named chairman of the arrangements committee for the party. Other members are Wallace Magathan, president of the Takoma Park Citizens Association, and Daniel B. Lloyd, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association.

Kenilworth Citizens

Action on the report of the Commissioners' hearing on the Seal plan was tabled at a meeting of the Kenilworth Citizens Association at Kenilworth School.

The opening of Nash street, between Forty-fourth street and Forty-fifth place northeast was requested of the District Commissioners. The group also went on record as favoring an increase in the equipment and personnel of the District Fire Department.

Candy Store Robber Not Sweet About It

Miss Mary Cameron, 25, assistant manager of a candy store in the 1000 block of F street northwest, was "almost scared to death," she said, when her store was robbed of $50 last night. She told police she was alone when a stocky, white man came in and told her "this is a stickup"

Bicyclist, 12, Seven Others Hurt in Traffic

Five Injured as Auto Leaves Road, Two When Cars Collide

A 12-year-old boy and seven automobilists were injured in traffic accidents yesterday.

Roland Miller 12, of 1029 Perry street northeast, received a possible skull fracture, cuts and bruises when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle at Seventeenth and Lawrence streets northeast. He was in an undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

Five persons were injured when the car in which they were riding ran off the road in the 2600 block of Tilden street northwest. All were treated at Emergency Hospital.

The injured were Frederick Johnson, 22, colored, of 2316 Champlain street northwest, compound leg fracture; Jerry Battle, 24, colored, 600 block Third street northeast, driver of the car, severe face cuts; Alice Stewart, 26, colored, Chevy Chase, Md., face and leg injuries; Ruth Stewart, colored, Chevy Chase, Md., cuts and bruises, and Lucille Myrick, colored, Chevy Chase, Md., leg bruises.

Injured in a two-car collision at Second and L streets northeast, Charles H. McVey, of 633 M street northeast, and Aloysius J. Cunningham, 49, of 4819 Kansas avenue northwest, were in Casualty Hospital last night. McVey suffered rib fractures and possible fracture of the skull, and Cunningham received minor cuts and bruises.

Marine Unhurt in Crash

Losing control of his car, which shot through a guard rail and rolled down a 30-foot embankment on Mount Vernon boulevard near Gravelly Point, Louis F. Hunter, 23, a Marine, of 710 Quincey street northwest, emerged from the wreckage uninjured last night. The auto was demolished.

Capital News In Brief

Kreis Wins Prize

George W. Kreis took first prize in the portrait and landscape divisions of the Internal Revenue Bureau camera contest, the Revenue Camera Club announced last night. Mark Trantham won first prize in the general division.

The judge was William J. Nagel, of a national film manufacturing company. At a meeting last night in the U. S. Public Health Service Auditorium, Nagel and Julian J. Chisholm printed an 8x10-inch photograph in colors, using separation negatives.

Thieves Get Space

Davar Smith came over from Baltimore yesterday with a delivery truckload of tea, coffee and spices. At Georgia avenue and Trumbull street northwest, the truck was stolen. Two hours later police recovered the truck at Eighth and Euclid streets northwest, but most of the coffee and spices were missing.

Firemen Save Coal

A ton of coal was saved by firemen of No. 5 Engine Company yesterday when a coal truck burst into flames at Twenty-fifth and M streets northwest. Caused by a short-circuit, the blaze consumed the motor and cab of the truck.

Mrs. Baker to Speak

"Government Looks Ahead" will be discussed by Mrs. Dorothy Beecher Baker, a relative of Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at 8:15 p. m. today in Room 502, Albee Building.

Polish Groups to Sew

The Polish Club of Washington and the Polish Women's Alliance will meet from 5:30 to 10 p. m. today at the District Red Cross Chapter House, Seventeenth and E streets northwest, to assist in sewing garments for Polish refugees.

Atom Machine Used to Smash Cancer Cells

The 224-ton cyclotron, atom-smashing device which recently won the Nobel Prize in physics for its inventor, has found use in the treatment of cancer, it was revealed yesterday.

The disclosure was made to the National Advisory Cancer Council, meeting at its new Bethesda, Md., headquarters. The council also awarded $3,000 to the National Research Council to continue compilation of its tumor registry, a statistical record of tumor and cancer diagnoses, valuable to cancer research because the disease is not generally reported to State or local health departments.

Use of the atom smasher in cancer treatment was described to the council in a report of Dr. Ernest Orlando Lawrence, of the University of California, the cyclotron's inventor. The laboratory monster's neutron rays, he said, have been used on human patients and "may break down the wild, self-reproducing cancer cells and effect, at least temporarily, some definite remission of disease progress."

Neutron rays are directed in a steady stream at the patient. They appear to penetrate deeper than the emanations of radium.

Dr. Lawrence also disclosed that the emanations of the cyclotron have also been used to create "synthetic radium" in the form of radioactive substances. He believed the equivalent of 100 grams of radium, in gamma ray activity, could be produced in certain substances which have a relatively long radio-active life.

These substances, perhaps, equal in therapeutic value to priceless amounts of radium, are being sent all over the world for experimental purposes.

Already in use is radio-active iodine, which Dr. Lawrence says he can produce in sufficient amounts for medical purposes. It is used in the study of thyroid diseases.

Besides the award to the National Research Council, the cancer institution also gave $1,000 to Duke University, $1,800 to the University of California, $3,600 to Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago and $2,400 to the University of Cincinnati.

Harrington Says Housing Must Go On

Government Will Have to Build if Private Enterprise Doesn't, He Declares

Government must meet the Nation's housing needs, if "private enterprise will not or cannot tackle this job," Col. Francis C. Harrington, commissioner of the Works Project Administration, said last night.

"The Government," he said, "must continue to meet the situation by long-term investments and partial subsidies," unless private business enters the field of low-cost housing "on a mass scale in the near future."

"There must be construction of housing for the low-income group on an ever larger and larger scale," he declared.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Washington Housing Association at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, Col. Harrington made a plea to capital and labor to sacrifice their immediate interests for the good of the Nation and for their own ultimate benefit.

Pointing to what he believes is the certainty that in the long run both workers and investors stand to gain by such sacrifice, he said:

"Traditional views may have to change not only among investors, but among labor leaders, before such large-scale housing construction can become a reality. But I believe that in America we have enough common sense to change our minds when it becomes necessary."

Science, Skill, Money

American housing, he said, is now urgently in need of repairs, modernization, demolition and new construction. "And, he pointed out, "from an engineering point of view, that would be very easy.

"We have the science, we have the skill, we have the labor, we have the materials, and we have the money to pay for this work."

He placed a large share of the responsibility for poor housing upon the unwillingness of investors to accept smaller returns on their capital.

"We all know," he said, "that returns on investments are not what they were 20 years ago. Most branches of industry have accepted this situation. The construction industry may have to make similar adjustments. I believe that the mass production of housing may take an even more significent place in our economic history than the mass production of automobiles."

The inability of relief, WPA and other low-income tenants to pay rent regularly, he said, has resulted in such a rarity of repair work that "municipal housing regulations in the interest of public health and safety are increasingly violated."

He said that this process had gone to the extent of "constituting a serious public emergency all over the United States."

Points to Relief Rents

Pointing out that relief workers are sometimes forced to pay rent equal to 50 per cent of their income, he said that the rent system had ceased to work. He urged immediate cooperation of all agencies concerned with families of low income and the unemployed to develop a "realistic rent policy," whereby landlords would be assured rents in return for keeping dwellings in repair. But he emphasized that the fundamental solution lies only with new construction.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, reporting on the work of the agency, said the ADA believed the solution to the immediate rent problem lay not with the cutting of rent through a Government subsidy, but through increasing the incomes of tenants. It is necesary, he said, to increase relief and to stabilize WPA payments.

J. Bernard Wyckoff, acting president of the association, attacked the District building inspection office. In the past three years, he said, the association has reported 2,284 violations of existing regulations, of which 2,104 have been corrected. "A good many second notices had to be sent to the building inspection office to get results," he said. "Recently we have had less cooperation."

Bethesda Bus Compromise Is Indicated

Rockville Delegates Reserve Action on Transit Co. Plan

Compromise on bus fare rates to Bethesda apparently was reached but Rockville representatives refused to commit themselves at an informal conference held yesterday at the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Capital Transit Co. had offered to split the proposed increase in half and provide four through rush-hour buses from Rockville to downtown Washington in morning rush hours and the same service returning to Rockville in evening rush hours. The non-rush-hour service would remain the same as at present with transfer from bus to street car at the District Line.

Increased service for the Bethesda area in the rush hour also was contemplated in the compromise, bus officials said, but did not commit themselves on the exact increase in service.

Bethesda representatives, headed by Eugene Van Veen, expressed themselves as favorable to the proposal but Rockville's group, headed by F. Bernard Welsh, special attorney, said they would rather reserve action until formal hearing before the commission.

The bus officials then said they intend withdrawing the present petition and substituting a new petition asking for the rates covered by the compromise proposal.

Benjamin Gruver, Capital Builder, Dies Here at 65

Benjjamin H. Gruver, 65, Washington builder, died yesterday at his home at the Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral avenue, after a year's illness.

Born in Reliance, Va., Mr. Gruver came to Washington when 39. He was the builder of hundreds of Washington homes. A director of the Securities Savings and Commercial Bank, he was a former member of the Board of Trade and the Congressional Country Club.

Surviving him are his wife, Helen Gruver, of Washington; a son, Dorie C., of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Adrian Aten, of Garden City, Long Island; two brothers, the Rev. W. F. Gruver, of Martinsburg, W. Va., and J. S. Gruver, of Washington; two sisters, Mrs. W. G. Irvin, and Miss Bertha Gruver, of Chevy Chase, Md.

4,000 at Restaurant Parley Eat, Look, Listen All at Once

President McVittie Encourages Tablecloth Writing as Sign Business Is Good— And 25% of Patrons Are Doing It, He Says

More than 4,000 members of the National Restaurant Association are here in convention talking food and eating toward a record.

A record-breaking exhibit surrounds them, where they can still eat food if they choose. And while eating they get lectures on new-fangled dishes, cutlery, serving techniques, linens, stoves, canned goods and a nifty that washes, dries, polishes, burnishes, sterilizes and then hands over the utensils in three minutes flat.

Between all this and a speech on the restaurant of the future, when headwaiters will know all comers by name and face, the president, A. A. McVittie, of Denver, who dressed in a red-checked suit and was met yesterday by a 40-piece band, told The Post he wants his patrons to write on his tablecloths.

25 Per Cent Writing on Cloths

"I want them to; it is a sign that business is good: that they have business to transact, and 25 per cent of them are writing on the linen these days," said McVittie.

Today, at an early bird breakfast, McVittie will be presented with a doughnut the size of a large automobile tire. There is a sentimental reason. On a Thanksgiving, 35 years ago, McVittie could only afford a doughnut and coffee while sojourning in Grand Islands, Nebr. Now, prosperous, he eats one every day, remembering.

Five hundred restaurateurs, watching the presentation, will join their president in a breakfast of grapefruit (Delmonico); cereal and cream, scrambled eggs, country style, farm sausages, apple fritters, fried nonjiny, toast, assorted rolls, corn bread, buns, doughnuts (McVittie), raspberry jam, orange marmalade and large coffee.

Big Meal to Be Tomorrow

Adjourning to the convention, they will discuss "Likes and Dislikes in Food Service in Individual Restaurants," "Whisperings From the Kitchen" and other technical problems. Then they will inspect the exhibits, some of which serve food, and repair to luncheons for ladies and men delegates. Thereafter they will hear "Modern Foods—Salads and Desserts" and witness demonstrations.

In the evening, William Denissen, a professional meat carver, will demonstrate techniques. The big meal comes tomorrow night, with a banquet offering in part:

Lobster, crabflakes and shrimps mixed with Russian dressing in tomato; celery, olives, nuts; chicken okra Espagnole Rastagais; broiled filet mignon on Smithfield ham with fresh mushroom truffle sauce; new stringless beans; potatoes O'Brien au gratin; grapefruit, avocado pear and pineapple on lettuce; Roquefort cheese dressing, cheese wafers; Spumoni ice cream on spun sugar in glass dishes sur socle; Gateau Mille Feuille (Diplomat). Seven hundred will attend.

The "Supper de Luxe" last night almost matched it, and attracted 700, who attended also to see the crowning of the queen and the dance.

Restaurant of Future

Said McVittie, discussing the restaurant of the future: "The walls are made of plywood, while the drapes at the windows, the carpets, yes, even the waitresses' uniforms and shoes, are made of paper . . . The air is not only conditioned but sterilized as well . . . The headwaiter seems to know all the special parties. He has simply associated the names with the faces that were visible when they called to make reservations on the new television-telephone system."

Outside the hall was a bologna sausage about 5 feet long and 15 inches around. Someone said they would give a radio or something to whoever guessed its exact size. The Washington Restaurant Association is cooperating in the convention.

Upshur Named Successor to Gen. MacDougal

Brig. Gen. William P. Upshur, commander of the Fleet Marine Force and the Marine base at San Diego, was selected last night for promotion to major general.

GEN. UPSHUR

President Roosevelt named him to succeed Maj. Gen. Douglas MacDougal, when the latter retires from the Marines for age, January 1.

A native of Richmond, Gen. Upshur attended Virginia Military Institute and was appointed to the Marines in 1904. He has served in Cuba, Panama, the Philippines, China, Haiti and San Domingo and was overseas during the World War. For gallantry in fighting Haitian bandits in 1915, he was awarded the congressional medal of honor. Gen. Upshur was on duty here from 1935 until recently.

Wife Identifies Body From River As Dredge Worker

A tearful wife yesterday identified a body dragged from the Potomac as that of her husband, missing since Friday.

Police recovered the body of William H. Snively, 27, of 55 Bates street northwest, lineman on the Gravelly Point Airport dredge Pennsylvania, after almost connuous search since his disappearance early Friday. His wife, May, made the identification at the District Morgue.

Koenigsberger Elected Head of Jewish Congress

Lawrence Koenigsberger was elected president of the Washington Jewish Congress at a meeting at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, last night. Zalmen Henkin and Rabbi Harry Silverstein were elected vice presidents.

Other new officers include Benjamin S. Spector, recording secretary; Melton Leinson, financial secretary, and Charles L. Pilzer, treasurer.

Dr. Arjeh Tartakower, vice president of the World Jewish Congress, discussed the work of the world organization in aiding the plight of Jews in Poland and other European war-stricken areas.

Children's Hospital Reveals Loss

Deficit More Than $25,000 a Year, Drayton Reports; Reserve Depleted

"The grand work done in the Children's Hospital day after day in the never-ending battle against disease and suffering" was coupled with a report of financial difficulties in the address by Charles D. Drayton, president of the hospital's board of directors, at annual meeting of corporation members yesterday.

Drayton said the hospital is running a deficit averaging more than $2,.000 a year.

Among factors in lower income in recent years he mentioned the decrease in interest rates on investments and failure of the Community Chest to reach its goal and therefore its inability to pay in full for services to indigent sick children sent there by the Chest.

Permanent Fund Depleted

"During 1939 we have entirely wiped out the indebtedness of $100,000 on the building and $14,000 in bank loans . . . However, it is to be emphasized that in order to effect these savings in interest charges we were compelled to use money from our permanent investment fund which it had taken years to accumulate. That fund has been greatly depleted, and should be restored as a necessary reserve," he said.

In the face of such difficulties, officials of the hospital reported progress in meeting children's needs. Dr. Joseph S. Wall, chief of staff, pointed out that nearly 7,000 bed patients were cared for in the last year, with more than 74,000 visits to the dispensary.

Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent, said 315 more children were treated in the hospital this year than last, and that visits to the dispensary had increased 1,848 in that period, with 934 more visits to the dental clinic.

Directors Reelected

James M. Green, Col. Reginald S. Huidekoper, C. Melvin Sharpe and Elwood Seal were reelected as directors. Reelected as directors to fill vacancies expiring as follows were Bruce Baird, 1940; Clarence Dodge, 1944; R. P. Hollingsworth, 1944; Wilson B. Nairn, 1941; Rear Admiral C. Russell Train, 1941.

Elected new annual members were Oscar W. Underwood, Albert Wilson Walker, Roland Whitehurst, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer, Robert W. Wilson, Robert Whitelaw Wilson, Allan Scott Wolf.

Reports were made by Miss Ashby Taylor, director of nurses; Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., president of the board of lady visitors; Miss Caroline Sweeney, of the Child Welfare Society; Miss Mary Poole, of the social service department; Miss Edith Torkington, of the Children's Country Home; Miss Anna Keady, of Christ Child Farm.

Hall Released On Bond in U. S. Fraud Charge

Harry L. Hall, former administrative officer for the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration, yesterday was released in $3,000 bond pending trial in Baltimore on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government.

Hall pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage here.

The indictment, returned in Baltimore Thursday, accused Hall of conspiring with the M. A. Long Co., of Baltimore, to obtain for the latter a $621,580 contract for installing machinery at Catano, P. R. Hall's share, it was alleged, was to be $26,000, with $7,000 of this to go to Jose A. Ferre, also named in the indictment.

Health Officer Plans Diphtheria Drive

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday urged parents not to delay having their children immunized against diphtheria as the Health Department prepared to launch its annual immunization campaign for pre-school and school children.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the bureau of preventable diseases, said four cases of diphtheria and one death from the disease had been reported last week. There wre 288 cases reported and five deaths in the last 11 months.

Referee Halloran Denies Attack by Ed Justice

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1939 X*

Baseball in Darkest Spot—Bramham

League Head Will Receive Report Today

Justice Faced Ban For Life if Attack On RefereeWasTaken To Loop President

Referee Bill Halloran declared last night that "Ed Justice did not strike me" and " as far as I know he did not even swing."

In a long distance telephone conversation with The Post from his home in Providence, R. I., the official who ruled on a field goal kick play that cost the Washington Redskins the Eastern Division title, said he had so informed Carl C. Storck, president of the National Professional League, in his official report to reach Storck today.

"Gosh, He's a Swell Boy"

Halloran, in denying charges that an unfavorable on Bo Russel's last-second placekick, which would have won for the Redskins, said:

"I have filed my report to Mr. Storck. In it I emphatically state that Justice didn't hit me. Some of my friends told me after the game that Justice had swung on me. But if he did, then I wasn't looking.

"Gosh, he's a swell boy and I'm sure he wouldn't have done such a thing. There has been a lot of misunderstanding over this, and I hope this will clear it up."

Earlier Storck, reached by phone at his home in Dayton, Ohio, had told The Post that he could make no decision on the alleged scuffle between Justice and Referee Halloran until he received a report from the official.

"Should Halloran say that he was struck by Justice," President Storck declared "then he will be barred from the league for life. And if Halloran charges that Justice attempted to strike him, the player will receive a $500 fine and a suspension for one year."

Justice, when informed by The Post that Referee Halloran had declared him innocent of the charges, said "it was one of the grandest piece of news I ever received. It's just as I have said all along, he added. I was plenty sore, naturally, but I didn't think of hitting him.

Rule in League Book

President Storck, asked to clarify the National Professional League's ruling on place kicks, stated that it was precisely as it is given in the official rule book.

Section 5 of Rule 9 states:

"During an attempted field goal, a part of the ball is outside of the vertical line indicating the outside edge of the goal post. Ruling—Not a field goal."

In other words Referee Halloran's reported contention that the kick was ruled not good because it sailed over the goal posts and not between them is entirely unfounded on National League rules.

A new light on the alleged scuffle between Justice and Halloran was shed last night when Jay Turner, Redskins' quarterback who was in the Washington backfield at the time of the kick, said that the only official Justice spoke to was Larry Connover, head linesman.

Halloran Angle Wrong

"Why I can't understand this talk about Justice swinging at Halloran," Turner said as he waited his turn to appear with teammates on the stage of the Capitol Theater.

"Ed (Justice) wasn't anywhere near the referee. It was Connover he was talking to."

This testimony was borne out by Roy Baker, Redskins' trainer.

"How could Justice have swung at Halloran when he (Halloran) jumped up into the stands as soon as the game was over?"

Turner said that he blocked Center Mel Hein of the Giants on the disputed place kick play, and Hein conceded the kick to be good.

"We watched the play together, "the former George Washington University fullback explained, "and saw the ball pass between the uprights. I jumped up into the air and yelled 'Hooray, hooray!' Hein just kicked at the ground and cussed."

"Best Team I've Coached"

Coach Ray Flaherty acclaimed his 1939 Redskins "as the best team I have ever assembled" at a farewell luncheon tendered the squad yesterday by the Redskins' ownership.

Paying tribute to his athletes despite their losing battle against the New York Giants, Flaherty declared, "I'll always believe you won that game. I want to say, too, that this squad has more spirit, more never-quit stuff than any team I have ever coached.

The Redskins are the same sort of a team he hopes to have next year, he added in congratulating them on their performances during the season. "And next year I think this team will win the championship."

Flaherty singled out no individual Redskin for his special praise in extending his blanket thanks to

Owen, Giant Coach, 'Wasn't Watching' Bo Russell's Boot

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Stout Steve Owen, who coaches the New York Giants of the National Pro Football League, told the biggest whopper of the entire 1939 season today.

It was at the Metropolitan Football Writers luncheon, and Toastmaster Allison Danzig had just asked Steve whether he thought the field goal try by "Bo" Russell, of the Washington Redskins, in the last 45 seconds of yesterday's pro game was good or wide.

"As a matter of fact," said Owen, "I wasn't even watching when the kick was made. I was talking," and his face still was as deadpan as ever, "to a man sitting behind me." There was a second of shocked silences, and then the place broke into an uproar of laughter.

"Seriously, though," Owen resumed, "I was in no position to judge. We won, 9-7, because the kick failed. But if Referee Bill Halloran had called it good, there'd have been no squawk from me. He's always called 'em as he saw them."

One of 14 Pro Marks Broken By Redskins

Forward Passing Efficiency of 58.2 Breaks Old Mark

Washington's Redkskins figured in only one of the 14 record-breaking feats of National League football teams this year, but they broke one of the most highly prized of all records.

The Redskins lifted the forward passing efficiency mark to a new high of 58.2 per cent with their 117 completions in 201 attempts. By a wide margin they shattered the former record of 48.9 per cent established by the Giants in 1938.

Every offensive record, with the exception of one, was wiped off the books as five forward passing, four ground-gaining, three scoring and two field goal standards were eclipsed and one field goal mark tied.

The Chicago Bears brushed aside

Attention Fans: Redskins Plan No Protest of Game

Reports which caused a dither in Washington yesterday when it was said that the final decision of the Redskins-Giants game had been reversed, proved completely groundless.

One broadcaster announced that films of the game revealed that Bo Russell's disputed last-minute kick had passed between the uprights despite Referee Bill Halloran's ruling to the contrary.

The Redskins have taken no steps to win a reversal of Halloran's ruling. They are abiding by the rule book, which states that "the referee shall be the sole authority for the score."

Post Asks Letters About Disputed Kick

Redskin Fans Solicited Concerning 'Good-or-Bad' Opinions on Winning Field Goal; Future Remedies Sought

Do you think Bo Russell's field goal attempt was good or not? The Post sport department has been besieged with phone calls on the disputed kick that settled the Eastern pro grid championship in favor of the New York Giants. In fact the whole town's talking but the only thing definite is Referee Bill Halloran's decision that called the kick outside. That stands.

Washington papers hint the kick was good. New York papers say no. Referee Halloran stands firm on his decision. Umpire Tom Thorpe walked off the field shaking his head. The Redskins say yes, the Giants no.

But Washington fans, whether they were back of the goal posts in question, in the open stands 100 yards away, high in the upper tier of the Polo Grounds in the gathering dusk looking at it from an angle, or seated snugly in the easy chair listening to the broadcast, say it as one, Yes.

The Post would like to hear from you on whether you saw the kick, whether you thought it was good or not, and what would be a reasonable plan for The Post to submit to league officials on preventing a recurrence of the same situation at another time, with a pro title, a bowl bid, a sectional title, $50,000 or a league championship at stake.

Today and through Friday The Post sports department is soliciting letters from the fans on any side of the story.

In approximately 200 words tell your version of the kick from your position in the Polo Grounds. Was it good, and what was your immediate reaction? And what do you suggest to prevent a similar happening. Install a "lightning eye" to click the ball as it goes through; extend the posts to, say, 50 feet; or would you limit the power of the referee and make it possible for his decision to be reversed?

Representative letters will be printed. Address: The Washington Post Sports Department, City.

Leo Durocher Agrees to Pilot Dodgers in '40

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 4.—Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, announced today that he had agreed on terms for Leo Durocher to manage the club again next season, but that the formal contract signing would not take place until February.

Said MacPhail at an hilarious press conference in the hotel where baseball's winter meetings are under way:

"I never talked to Durocher about terms until we came here for the meetings. But there was never any question between either of us that he would run the club next year."

MacPhail refused to say how long the conract would run but, as for money, the Dodger president declared:

"I'll say this: He may not get paid what the contract calls for. He got paid more last year than the contract read and he's one of my boys."

MacPhail added that whether Durocher continued as a player was entirely up to the manager.

Bartell to Tigers?

Chicago, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Chicago Times said tonight the Chicago Cubs "had agreed" to trade Shortstop Dick Bartell to the Detroit Tigers for Shortstop Billy Rogell.

Overlin Wins Decision Over Babe Orgovan

Ranking Middle Weight Has Little Trouble at Arena

Ken Overlin, the Nation's No. 2 ranking middleweight, was the No. 1 fighter of the world as far as Babe Orgovan was concerned last night, the classy Decatur, Ill., puncher turning in a unanimous eight-round decision in the feature bout at Turner's Arena.

To the crowd of slightly more than than 1,000, however, the bout was a little less than thrilling. Overlin was the class by such a wide margin that half the customers walked out without bothering about the decision after the sixth round.

From the start of the scrap, held up by Manager Chris Dundee's objection to knots in Orgovan's glove strings, until the end, Overlin peppered his younger opponent with painful but not too damaging lefts. He didn't bother to open the Babe up for blows—almost every punch he threw landing in the face.

Orgovan Takes Beating

By the time the fifth round had rolled around Orgovan's face was a purple welt, and in the seventh his left eye started leaking slightly. Touted as a two-fisted scrapper, Orgovan turned up with nothing more potent than a globular right hook that did exactly no damage.

According to Orgovan, his solitary trip to the canvas in the third round was the first of his career. He stayed down for nine. In the fourth the bell saved the timekeeper the trouble of counting again, when Orgovan appeared ready to go down at the bell. The New Yorker's only convincing blows were landed in the seventh and eighth as he tried desperately to overcome the insurmountable advantage Overlin had piled up. Once he connected with a good left, and another time with a solid right,

Minor Loop Head Flays Practices

Charges Contracts And Forges, Figures On Attendance Are False; Plans Cleanup

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 4.—A chubby, usually jovial judge, named by the minor leagues seven years ago to lead them from a depression morass, lashed business agents of the clubs today with the assertion that baseball "is in the darkest spot since the Black Sox scandal."

William G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, spared nothing but names as he told the first day's gathering of the minors that contracts were being hidden and forced, that even attendance figures were being falsified and that some clubs' affairs were in the hands of incompetent individuals.

Cites Troubles

While hundreds of baseball men thronged the hotel headquarters of the convention, milling through the lobbies and halls, the minor leaguers took the show away from the major league magnates, who talked singly and in groups, but accomplished nothing.

In the meeting of the minors, attended by some 300 club representatives, Bramham followed his declaration regarding the Black Sox scandal," which occured in this same city exactly 20 years ago during a world series, by citing troublesome instances.

"We have a case before us now in which a club filed 14 contracts calling for salaries from $60 to $90 per month. We found that the players had not signed those contracts, but that their names had been forged," Bramham asserted.

"The contracts signed by the players called for salaries of $175 to $250 per month and those were the salaries they drew, although those salaries put the club's total salaries far above the league limit."

Incompetent Officials

Bramham added that all officials of the club from the multimillionaire owner down to the manager, professed not to know who was responsible but that "someone is going to be seriously hurt before it's cleared up."

Then, to show that this was not an isolated contract mixup, Bramham said he heard 507 free-agency appeals from players last year and ex-

Deals Rumored On Baseball Mart:

Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers negotiating deal which would send Outfielder Doc Cramer or Outfielder Joe Vosmik and Catcher Johnny Peacock, of Boston, to Detroit for Catcher Birdie Tebbetts.

Scarscella

Cleveland Indians sought Outfielder Bob Johnson from Philadelphia Athletics, but after some discussion the veteran Connie Mack told Manager Oscar Vitt, of Indians, "Mr. Vitt, I wouldn't trade you Bob Johnson for Bob Feller even."

Chicago Cubs sought Shortstop Arky Baughn from Pittsburgh Pirates and Shortstop Billy Myers from Cincinnati, and were refused.

Cincinnati Reds were trying to make a deal for First Baseman Les Scarsella, who can't be returned to minors again and presumably can't be used by Reds. One proposal would send him and Third Baseman Lou Riggs to New York Giants for Outfielder Joe Moore. Another would send him to Boston Bees for an outfielder.

Brooklyn Dodgers were seeking Catcher-Outfielder Don Padgett, of St. Louis Cardinals, and President Larry MacPhail told newspapermen, "If anybody can get Padgett for me for $10,000, I'll give $10,000 commission."

VOSMIK

Chicago White Sox were reported peddling Outfielder Gee Walker either for Catcher Pytlak, of Cleveland, or in some combination with Detroit.

Pittsburgh was believed to have Outfielder John Rizzo on the market, possibly for direct deal with Brooklyn for Infielder Johnny Hudson or Outfielder Ernie Koy and other considerations.

Cincinnati proffered Pitcher Lee Grissom to New York Giants for Joe Moore, with other considerations involved.

Philadelphia Phillies would send Catcher Walter Millies to Jersey City, of International League, for unknown considerations.

Brooklyn Dodgers seeking either Outfielder Hank Leiber or Outfielders Augie Galan, of Chicago Cubs, and offering Infielder Johnny Hudson and an outfielder.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

For 400 years the late Mr. Shakespeare and his melancholy stooge, Hamlet, have been insisting that To-Be-Or-Not-To-Be is the question. That might have been hot stuff in the sixteenth century but it is strictly eye-wash this week. There's a new question burning the innards of Washington football fans:

POVICH

Who booted one—Bo Russell or Referee William Halloran?

And the answer that Washington fans like to hear is that they both booted one—that Russell booted a last-minute place-kick at the Polo Grounds and that the referee booted the decision on the play when he called it a miss. To hear Washington fans tell it, "we wuz robbed."

Coming in the form that it did, that 9-7 beating the Giants gave the Redskins was hard to take. But that is natural. Diogenes' lantern-light search for an honest man was just a breeze; let him try to find a philosophic football fan.

The Redskins Were Not 'Robbed'

But about that kick, this much is certain: The Redskins were not robbed. At worst they may have been the victims of an honest mistake, but they weren't given what is known as the works. Bill Halloran isn't that sort of a fellow. He is a highly respected gentleman, fearless in his decisions and no green-pea as a football referee. He is the sort who had the courage to call back a Harvard touchdown once upon a time and if he said Russell's kick was wide of the posts, which he did, then Bill Halloran believed it.

Some day they'll have to come to a photo-finish for place kicks. And the ordinary movie camera won't do. A place-kick is a deceptive thing, especially when it is 20 feet above the highest extremities of the posts as Russell's was. We've seen kicks that from the press box appeared to split the posts only to see the referee give the flat no-good sign. We believe nothing about place-kicks now until we see the referee give his decision. At least he's in the best position to call a kick.

Sutherland Agrees With Halloran

For every Washington fan and football writer who vows that Russell kicked a goal, there are New Yorkers who insist that he missed. Yesterday, in New York, Giant players Mel Hein and Ed Danowski, who were reported to have admitted the kick was good made emphatic denials. Jock Sutherland made a brief comment. "It was no good," he said.

We were just thinking how much beefing there would have been if the same sort of a kick had happened in the first quarter and the same sort of a decision given by Halloran. The squawks would have been mild, if any, it is a safe wager. But in the hysteria of the last minute of play, well, it was a situation of another color.

Hindsight is better than foresight in any league, but the Redskins' own strategy probably cost them the ball game. The ball was on the 5-yard line just before the kicking play, and the Redskins voluntarily took a 5-yard penalty for excessive time outs in an effort to consolidate their forces for the placement attempt. From 5 yards closer, the accuracy of Russell's kick would probably have been indisputable.

Tillie Manton Still Winning Games

Maybe we shouldn't bring this up because young Russell was a valiant figure in getting that kick away, but there was, for the Redskins, a painful paradox to the situation. Because out in Los Angeles that same afternoon two field goals were being kicked successfully by a lad named Tillie Manton to win for the Los Angeles Bulldogs. You may remember that name, because Manton was with the Redskins last year. They discharged him during the winter.

Manton apparently is a sort of handy man to have around. Two weeks before, he also kicked a pair of field goals to win another game for Los Angeles. That may be a minor league on the Coast, but the posts are no farther apart and they use the same type of ball.

There can't be any quarrel with Russell, however. It required only a favorable decision on a kick apparently so close it might have been called either way to make a glittering hero out of the young tackle from Auburn who inherited the Redskins' kicking job.

What the game did bring into bright focus is the importance of developing or acquiring a field-goal kicker. The Giants are not the sort of team to overlook a bet. Even the fact they had in Ward Cuff perhaps the deadliest of all place-kickers did not deter them from signing Ken Strong this season. The aging Strong, now all but useless on defense and no star as a blocker, is still a cherished possession of the Giants. They know the importance of three points.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 4.—"I don't want to criticize Ray Flaherty," his mentor, Coach Steve Owen, of the New York Football Giants, said today at the N. Y. Football Writers luncheon, "but if Bill Halloran had called that place-kick of Beau Russell's good, I wouldn't have stirred off my bench. I would've taken his word, not only because the fellow's honest as they come, but because neither Flaherty nor I were sitting in any position to say whether it was good or bad."

CONSIDINE

The burly coach of the Giants, who won the Eastern championship of the National Football League on Sunday in the wildest fray in years, denies with some heat the report that two of his players, Mel Hein and Ed Danowsky, came to Russell after the furious business and told him he had been robbed.

"I asked each one of them about that story and they laughed out loud," stout Steve protested. "I can't say whether it was good or bad, any more than Flaherty, whose seat was as bad as mine was. If anything I could see a little better, because the way the ball curved was directly away from me—kind of on a line, where it was just the opposite on the other side of the field.

The 'Irish' in Flaherty Came Out

"But you can't blame an Irishman for blowing up, under those circumstances," Steve chuckled. "That was a terrific finish, all right. I know how he feels, too. Back in 1934 we lost one something like that. We had the Bears licked 9-7 right at the end and somebody stole the ball out of Harry Newman's hands. That gave the Bears the ball and Jack Manders kicked a long field goal to lick us, 10-9."

Somebody said that the Reds certainly tried hard to do the same little ball steal act in the 45 seconds that remained of the game after Russell's kick missed.

"Yeah, I figured they would," Steve said. "That's why I put in Bull Karcis. I knew that they couldn't snatch that ball away from him, on those last few plays, even if they used sledgehammers.

"But heck, we deserved to win. It would have been tougher to take that game away from us than it was the other way. We would've had a touchdown on the third play of the game if Cuff hadn't slipped in the clear. And they never would've been close enough for a kick to mean anything if Barnum hadn't taken so much time on that punt they blocked near the end."

Somebody quoted Quentin Reynolds, who watched Russell's celebrated field-goal try from up in Horace Stoneham's office behind the goal posts, as saying that the kick was five feet wide of the right post.

Lou Little Agreed With Ref's Decision

Lou Little, sitting four steaks away from Owen at the luncheon, said there wasn't any doubt in his mind about the miss, either.

Somebody asked Steve if he didn't think his Giants were a little rough on Andy Farkas' carcass, for the Washington sparkplug was hurt the second time he carried the ball.

"You've got to tackle that fellow high or you won't tackle him at all," Steve said. "If you go for his legs he'll feint you out of the way. You've got to get on top of him and bear him down. I guess his leg gave way from the weight on him."

A fellow with a mouthful of porterhouse said, "I was reading the papers before the game and feeling sorry about Tuffy Leemans' condition, Steve. Too bad the fellow was so badly hurt. All he could do was stop two Washington drives with interceptions and set up Cuff's winning field goal with a 20-yard run."

Steve beamed like a proud father.. "I went to Tuffy before the game and asked him if his leg was good enough to play on. You know it looks something terrible. But he said, 'listen, Steve, it hurt yesterday and it's going to hurt tomorrow. But right now it's okay."

Betting Spoils of Navy Victory Over Army Include 3,500 Robes

Many Sweaters, Cufflinks, Other Portables Won by 'Shoot the Works' Middies

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 4.—Navy's football victory over Army solved the Christmas gift problem for 2,300 midshipment—even the regimental "snakes" with several girls to remember.

The midshipmen to a man "went overboard" in their bets on the game with West Point cadets. Forbidden to bet money on the contest, they "shot the works" in wagering sweaters, cuff links, bathrobes and nearly everything portable they owned.

Determined to show unprecedented support of the team, despite its poor early season record, they even increased bets made early in the year. Some middies wagered three and four bath robes on the contest.

A check of the regiment today disclosed the middies estimated 3,500 bath robes, together with other trophies, ranging from the Pullman conductor's cap, wagered on the way to the game, to half a bushel of cuff links.

But the bath robes arriving every mail from West Point won't tarry long in Annapolis. Trophies won from the Army in fair combat are the most prized gifts a middie can give at Yuletide, or that his OAO—one-and-only girl, in middie parlance—can receive.

So the victory has definitely eased the Christmas shopping worries of the regiment, and everybody's happy—except possibly the Army and the Annapolis merchants, who would have sold lots more Christmas gifts if Navy had lost.

Texas Aggies Outstanding in U. S.

Tennessee U. Holds Second In Balloting

Two Stand Out for Rose Bowl, But Must Win Last Games to Get Game on Coast

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 4.—The Rose Bowl promoters won't pick the contending teams for their New Year's Day festival until after Southern California battles U. C. L. A. and Tennessee meets Auburn on Saturday, and the country's football experts won't arrive at their final decision on which is the No. 1 team of the year until those games are played.

In the next-to-last Associated Press ranking poll of the season, they appear to have decided on Texas A. and M. the all-winning Southwest Conference champions, breaking out of last week's tie for the lead with Southern Cal, moved back into outright possession of first place today with a total of 763 points out of a possible 870.

Twenty-eight of the 87 ballots ranked the Farmers at the head of the list, and there wasn't a single expert who placed them lower than sixth.

Vols Bounce Back

Tennessee, pushed down to fourth position a week ago, came rocketing back into second place after its defensively powerful exhibition against Kentucky. Polling 19 first-place votes, the Vols accumulated 741 points, to trail the Aggies by only 22 and lead U. S. C. by 32. The Trojans got 18 nominations for first place, to 15 for Cornell, which dropped into fourth position. Tulane, practically a fixture in fifth, remained there for another week.

Outside of Tennessee's rise and Cornell's drop, the major changes occurred in the lower half of the first ten. There U. C. L. A., which has its own ideas about Southern California's eligibility for the Rose Bowl and will attempt to put them in practice Saturday, came out of the second ten into ninth place. Duquesne, tied by Detroit in its finale after winning all its other games, skidded from sixth to tenth; Duke advanced from seventh to sixth, Missouri from eighth to seventh and Iowa from ninth to eighth, while Holy Cross, tenth a week ago, dropped down with the last of the also-rans after its thorough defeat by Boston College.

Standing of Teams

Standing of the teams (points figured on 10-9-8, etc., basis, first- place votes in parentheses):

Team.	Points.
1—Texas A. and M. (28)	763
2—Tennessee (19	741
3—Southern California (18)	709
4—Cornell (15)	665
5—Tulane (5)	572
6—Duke (1)	307
7—Missouri	242
8—Iowa	138
9—U. C. L. A.	99½
10—Duquesne	90

SECOND TEN—11, Notre Dame, 88½; 12, Ohio State, 82; 13, Georgia Tech, 62; 14, Boston College, 57; 15, Clemson, 46; 16, Santa Clara, 39; 17, Nebraska, 21; tied for 18, Fordham and San Jose (Calif.) State, 20 each; 20, Georgetown, 19.

ALSO RAN—Michigan, 13; Princeton and North Carolina, 11 each; Oregon State and Southern Methodist, 6 each; Villanova, 4; Oklahoma, 3; Holy Cross, Colorado and Minnesota, 1 each.

The margin between Texas A. and M. and the second and third-place teams is close enough so that an overwhelming margin of victory for either of these two this week-end might send it to the top in next week's final poll. Tennessee appears to have the easier task, but may be hampered by injuries to its two ranking key backfield men, George (Bad News) Cafego and Johnny Butler. Southern California will have to hold Kenny Washington and Jack Robinson in check if it hopes to overcome U. C. L. A.'s unbeaten, thrice-tied Bruins.

Packers-Giants Pro Game Ticket Rush Under Way

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Dec. 4.—Football fans stood in line for hours today to buy tickets for next Sunday's National Professional Football League championship game here between the Green Bay Packers and the New York Giants.

The first line formed at 7:30 a. m., although tickets didn't go on sale until noon.

Long distance telephone calls poured in all morning while operators explained that no phone reservations could be accepted.

Of the 30,000 seats which will make for an $80,000 gate at State Fair Park Sunday, 4,000 already had been sent to Green Bay, the home of the packers.

Ripley Expects Sophomore Team To Be Improved

Double-header basketball will be introduced by Georgetown University tomorrow night when Elmer Ripley's team entertains Western Maryland's Green Terrors at Tech High School, 8:30 o'clock.

In a 7 o'clock attraction Georgetown University's freshmen meet Western High School's Red Raiders.

A newly installed scale of popular prices for all save major games locally is expected to find favor with Washingtonians.

Though upset by University of Baltimore Saturday, 40 to 34, the Georgetown team that makes its local debut against the Green Terrors tomorrow night is rich in promise, Ripley declared yesterday.

"I'm coming back with the same line-up against Western Maryland that we started against Baltimore," Ripley declared yesterday, "and I expect to see an improvement in our sophomores.

"Some of the kids had stage fright against Baltimore, but they were clicking smoothly as the game progressed. This team, once it hits its stride, may prove one of Georgetown's finest in years."

Jim Giebel, former National Catholic School boy center while with St. John's High School of this city, again will be started at center by the Hoyas, while George Pajac and Dick Dieckleman will play the forwards. Capt. Johnny Schmitt and Irving Rizzi will be the starting guards.

Shore Will Play For Bruins Tonight

Boston, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—The controversial Eddie Shore case took a new twist tonight when the Boston Bruin management announced that Shore would play at defense against the New York Americans tomorrow in place of "Flash" Hollett, who was called to Toronto by the death of his son.

The announcement said that Shore had expressed his sympathies for Hollett's loss and offered his services which were accepted. Last week the dispute between Shore and the Bruins reached a point where it was believed doubtful that the defense star would play for the Boston team again.

Duquesne May Play St. Mary's in 1940

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4 (AP).—While cocking an ear for a post-season bowl game bid, the undefeated Duquesne University eleven announced today it had tentatively booked a game with St. Mary's on the West Coast for November 9 or 10 next year. If the deal is closed, it would start a three-year series with the Galloping Gaels. The Dukes wound up one of their most successful seasons Saturday by deadlocking Detroit's Titans, 10-10.

Cornell Places Three Men on A. P. Team; Nowaskey, G. W., on Second Team at End; Georgetown's Kopcik Is Mentioned

By Herb Barker,
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, December 4.—For the second year in succession, Cornell's ivy league champions place three men on the All-Eastern football team compiled today by the Associated Press.

Drawn from the unbeaten, untied Cornell array are three juniors—Tackle Nick Drahos, Center rFank Finneran and End Alvah Kelley—but the eight remaining positions are split by as many colleges.

Sharing the end posts with Kelly is Harlan Gustafson, tall, rangy captain of Pennsylvania's team, while Drahos' running mate at tackle is Harry Stella, standout performer in an otherwise unimpressive Army outfit.

Flanking Finneran at the guard positions are Agostino Lio, junior line star of Georgetown's unbeaten team, and Ernest Schwotzer, of Boston College.

The first team backfield is made up of Ed Boell, of New York University; Ronnie Cahill, of Holy Cross; Bill Hutchison, of Dartmouth, and Dominic Principe, of Fordham.

This array of all-star talent averages 195 pounds in the line and 183 in the backfield.

Mintson Captures Inaugural Purse at Charles Town Track

$8.40 Ticket Is Returned By Winner

Blabah Is Second After Battle Down Stretch; Long Shot Pays $76.20 Mutuel

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 4.—So far the President has not changed the date of Christmas but the opening program proved Christmas Day as racing began its final stand for 1939 here, adjacent to the Blue Ridge Mountains. Carrying the colors of B. F. Christmas and the greenbacks of many in the crowd of 5,000, Mintson drove to a victory in the Inaugural Purse, featuring the program.

Running with Tedmelia, owned by F. D. Christmas, Mintson provided an $8.40 mutuel for his backers while under a good ride by Jockey M. Sarno. Grandpa Willie Obert, aboard O. S. Jennings' Blablah, was second and his mount was four lengths in advance of T. Lee Evans' Phone Dijon.

Mintson was clocked in 1:23 2-5 for the 6½ furlongs over a slow track.

The race was an interesting one and most of the way it appeared to be Blablah's purse. Obert got the Economie filly to the top going to the first turn. Caidon refused to be shaken off at this point and kept dogging the leader. Mintson was fourth at this stage.

Blablah finally got rid of Caidon leaving the backstretch and seemed on the way to the big pay. However, Mintson came through on the inside to save ground and loom menacingly. Entering the stretch, Jockey Sarno took Mintson to the outside of Blablah and the stretch battle was on. Blablah stuck to her guns for part of the way but Sarno stung Mintson with the whip and the colt rallied to open a lead at the end.

While the day brought several photo finishes the camera was not used for first money in the sixth race. Schley Goree, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., took the lead at the start and won by 15 lengths. He was $6 favorite in the test of a mile and a sixteenth. Tutticurio was second and Dohoev third. First Entry, well played, delayed the start, was placed on the outside and then broke down in the running.

A longshot and a favorite figured in the $76.20 pay-off in the daily double. After Strapol had surprised by winning the second race, James Pal did as was expected in the favored role in the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOTORIETY, $9.60, $5.40, $2.80; LENA GIRL, $13.20, $4.40; TAVERN, $2.20.

NOTORIETY was rushed to the front at once, drew out and was not threatened while running easily. LENA GIRL saved ground from the start and closed with good energy. TAVERN was hard ridden, but could not better his position. WINKING MOON was closest to the pace to the stretch and weakened. ASTER PRINCESS went evenly and was held safe. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:10. Off at 2:12. Winner, P. Perry's gr. m. (6), by Strathleven—Plain Polly. Trained by P. Perry. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STRAPOL, $14.20, $5.80, $3.60; NAY NAY, $4.00, $2.80; BEACON QUEEN, $5.20.

STRAPOL went to the front under hustling tactics at the first turn, came in to save ground and was kept to a drive to the end. NAY NAY was off in the first flight and was kept to hard riding throughout. BEACON QUEEN came willingly at the close. RUNOUT was off slowly and weakened after being rushed to contention on the outside. GOANTELL lacked early speed.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:38⅘. Winner, A. B. Parker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES PAL, $4.20, $2.80, $2.60; SONGSTOP, $2.80, $3.40; MY GRAND, $5.20.

JAMES PAL shook off SONGSTOP to gain a good lead, drew out and held away thereafter, winning easily. SONGSTOP was hard ridden to press the early pace and held on gamely. MY GRAND was close up from the start and closed with good energy. SQUARE PLAY was well placed for 3 furlongs and dropped back. MONOLOGUE was through early.

Daily Double, NOTORIETY and JAMES PAL, Paid $76.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start bad from stall. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:05½. Off at 3:06. Winner, John Bosley's ch. g. (3), by Westwick—Tramar. Trained by John Bosley. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BERWYN, $7.60, $5.40, $4.00; SOUR CHERRY, $13.60, $5.00; TIMETTA, $3.00.

BERWYN assumed command at once, drew out and won handily. SOUR CHERRY closed ground in the final quarter to show good effort. TIMETTA, hard ridden while closest to the pace, weakened right at the close. REMOLEE closed gamely. ASTERISK could not keep up. FEATHER TREAD had some early foot. CHIEF DE SOTA and COURNORA went in the air at the break.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33½. Off at 3:36. Winner, B. F. Christmas' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINTSON (entry), $8.40, $3.40, $2.40; BLABLAH, $3.40, $2.60; PHONE DIJON, $2.60.

MINTSON, within striking distance from the start, saved ground to better her position, came on the outside of BLABLAH for the final drive and was up in the concluding strides. BLABLAH gained command at the first turn, was hard ridden, but could not resist the winner while put to intermittent punishment. PHONE DIJON, close up to the backstretch, dropped back and came again under a hard drive. CAIDON pressed the pace of BLABLAH and weakened. TEDMELIA was held safe. DULIE raced wide throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but FIRST ENTRY from the stall. Won handily; place same. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:12½. Winner, R. A. Bowman, jr.'s ch. c. (4), by Ed Crump—Luce. Trained by A. S. Bowman. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCHLEY GOREE, $6.00, $3.00, $2.80; TUTTICURIO, $4.20, $3.60; DOHOEV, $3.60.

SCHLEY GOREE forged to the front early, drew out gradually and won in hand. TUTTICURIO was well placed from the start and closed gamely. DOHOEV was held safe throughout. MARCHING MAN was closest to the pace for the half and weakened. FIRST ENTRY, started outside the gates, broke down in the running.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but GRANDIFLORA from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:38½. Off at 4:39½. Winner, R. A. Lowe's b. f. (4), by Mud—Lady Modish. Trained by E. Sweeney. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUCHESS DEL, $82.00, $22.80, $8.20; BLOX, $9.80, $5.20; SCHLEY BUCK, $4.60.

DUCHESS DEL, in the thick of contention from the start, wore down SCHLEY BUCK and MISS MASCARA to take command and withstood the closing bid of BLOX while under good handling. BLOX worked his way to contention, came up on the outside of DUCHESS DEL, but could not stay while under a hard drive. SCHLEY BUCK set a good pace and weakened. HIT AND RUN was not a serious factor. GRANDIFLORA was off poorly and closed a gap. ANN MOWLEE could not threaten. MISS MASCARA quit.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

It is worth a trip to this track to see the sporty electric odds board. The infield job is just about the smartest thing we have seen at a track and that goes for Santa Anita and the like. In addition, there are new boards in the main betting ring and in the clubhouse. This track also started something when it placed numbers on the inside rail to aid the customers in determining the number of lengths at the finish on the various horses. I had a long talk with Jockey Buddy Root. He has recovered from that severe back injury suffered at Marlboro and is ready to ride. However, he intends to take only a few mounts and may ride one today. Mrs. Root and their new baby are at the Root home in Kansas City. The youngster is topping 8 pounds these days. Sammy Palumbo is here and weighs around 116 pounds. He will take some mounts soon. Outrider Henry Erickson ran into hard luck in the third race of the meeting. A horse kicked him while at the post and he was taken to the Charles Town Hospital. Apparently, he suffered a broken. Well, Dunlad may not be able to run but he gets his name in the papers. Today he's on the also eligible list in the seventh race. If he doesn't go he will get another star. That makes two. Each time a horse gets in the entries but does not run he gets a star. Brook Johns, over at Bowie, said: "One of my horses has so many stars that I'm thinking about engaging Betsy Ross for a jockey." Former Jockey Herb Lauch has taken over the book for Jockey Coffman. Now for the winners. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Blue Prelude has the kind of speed that is necessary to win a short sprint of this kind. Needs only to break with the leaders. Wa Out has plenty of foot and is dangerous. Chief Hollis has worked well and will be close.

Second race—Wale Signal breaks off the rail for this test and seems capable of handling the weight and the opposition. Cowley will do the riding. Molasses Julia, first on the also eligibile list, will be a threat if in action. Doctor's Nurse to take care of the others.

Third race—By Surprise may be the right one in this rather open race. Packs the necessary early foot and likes the route. Princess Girl breaks off the rail and is reported fit and ready. Happy Host will be a keen contender if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—Jadaan likes this oval and has good past performances. Needs only the right ride to beat these. Big Fish was a good one in the Middle West and may be a threat. Fernbrake and Bullet B. showed signs of life at Bowie.

Fifth race—There is speed and more speed in this field. Hiblaze, despite the 118-pound assignment gets my call. He will have to come from behind but I believe he will. Roman Boy was something of a champion around here last summer. Tuleyries Lin for the show end.

Sixth race—Sun Sweep will be back on the home grounds for this. May take the lead and forget to stop. High Betsy was well backed on occasions on the big time and is dangerous. Dian for the minor award.

Seventh race—Geodesian gets in this light and ran in good fashion around Maryland. May be the rignt one in a tough field. War Rumor has plenty of foot and is dangerous.

Eighth race—Sub—If this race is used, I'll take Bright Chance, Easter Holiday and Easiest Way.

Best bet—Wale Signal.

Eagles Seek Revenge in Game With Sea Gulls Tonight

Second-Place Tie Is Sought By D.C. Team

Victory at Riverside Would Lift Locals In Standings; Hard Battle in Prospect

The Washington Eagles have a double incentive to defeat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls in their Eastern Amateur League engagement at Riverside Stadium tonight at 8:30.

Motive (1) is avenge for their recent 8-3 licking by the Gulls at Atlantic City, when the match nearly resulted in a free-for-all, and (2) is to move into a tie for second place with the Baltimore Orioles, who will idle.

The standings now show the New York Rovers out in front with six victories, one tie and two losses for 13 points; Baltimore second with five victories and four losses for 10 points, and the Eagles third with four victories and six defeats for eight points.

A victory tonight over the rough-and-ready Gulls, plus another over the Orioles, who will invade here for their first appearance next Tuesday night, would greatly enhance Washington's chances of taking the Hershey Cup series. The Hershey Cup schedule calls for 22 games..

The Eagles, benefitting now from a less taxing schedule than in the early weeks of the league when in one stretch they were called upon to play six games in eight nights, are in good condition. Len Burrage, smart defenseman, who was several weeks late in reporting to the team from London where he had been warbound, is rapidly rounding into peak shape, and Ross Knipfel and other slightly injured boys seem fully recovered.

The Sea Gulls, incidentally, can tie the Eagles for third place with a victory, which would be their third in five games with the locals.

developed among the backs and the ends in a season when the general level of Eastern play seemed at a lower ebb than it has been for several years.

The first team backfield, as selected, nevertheless combines running, passing, blocking and defensive skill to a high degree. Cahill, acknowledged as perhaps the East's finest passer for two years, was the principal cog in Holy Cross' potent offensive. Hutchinson's running ability is too well known to require comment. Boell probably was the most versatile back in the East this season, a runner, passer and kicker of marked ability. Principe gives the first team the necessary line-smashing, blocking and defensive assistance.

Not far behind this quartet come the second-team backfield, made up of Walter Matuszczak, Cornell's great blocker and play-caller; Francis Reagan, brilliant Penn star; Nice Basca, sparkplug for Villanova, and Merlyn Condit, of Carnegie Tech.

Nowaskey, Kopcik Close

Gustafson, a brilliant pass-catcher, and Kelley, rated by Coach Carl Snavely the smartest end he ever coached, get the call over a formidable band of rivals, including Bob Nowaskey, of George Washington; John Dickinson, alert Pitt wingman; Francis Stulgaitis, of Columbia, and Mike Kopcik, of Georgetown.

Drahos and Stella performed with such consistent brilliance that there could be small room for argument over the tackles, even though the available field included such stalwarts a. Carl Nery, of Duquesne; Bob Tierney, of Princeton; Charley Craig, of Rutgers; Joe Ungerer, of Fordham, and Happy Petereit, of New York University.

At the guards, Schwotzer and Lio, a place-kicking star, beat out such rivals as Jim Turner, of Holy Cross; Wade Mori, of Penn State; Cape Burman, of Yale; Howard Dunbar, of Cornell; Bobby Rieth, of Carnegie Tech, and Harold Klein, of Pitt.

Finneran, iron man of the Cornell line, a steady, under-estimated workman, takes over the pivot position from such rivals as Joseph William Stack, of Yale; Ray Frick, of Penn; Jim Conlin, of New York University; Andy Chisick, of Villanova, and Leon Gajecki, of Penn State.

Six members of Georgetown and Catholic University teams were scattered among the honorable mentions, including Kopcik and Joe Carrig, C. U., ends; Joe Daniels, Georgetown, tackle, and three backs, Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas, Georgetown, and Rocco Pirro, Catholic.

Left—For the first time in a number of years Eastern High will depend on comparatively small youngsters in the approaching interhigh basketball season. Neil Craig, a newcomer to the squad, is to the left of Moe Shulman and Warren Erhardt, two of four lettermen left to the Tide. Al Helvestine is the other tiny player. Above, dressing for another practice session is Bob Custer, potshot artist whose cracked collar bone has furnished Eastern officials considerable worry. If it's mended sufficiently, Custer can make the difference between a winning and losing season for the Lincoln Parkers but if they worried the 29-year-old Overlin he didn't show it.

The victory was Overlin's sixth in as many weeks, his next bout being a return with Ben Brown in Miami. After that, according to his handlers, he says goodby to the middleweight ranks and joins the light-heavies.

"Killer" Wins Waltz

The evening got off to a ragged start as two colored scrappers, "Battling" Zuzu and "Killer" Lamar, worried each other for four rounds. The "Killer," probably on the strength of his ability to dodge roundhouses, took the decision. Zuzu's tumble to the floor in the third, when Lamar sidestepped, didn't help his cause.

Another four went to Buster Miller, former amateur featherweight champion, when he opened a gash over "Bogeyman" Holman's left eye eary in the second stanza. The time of the technical knockout was 1 minute 10 seconds. Miller had taken the first on superior infighting and a sharp left jab.

In a return middleweight grudge battle between Washington's Buddy Holmes and Baltimore's Tommy Mollis, the latter used his experience and a stiff right to repeat a previous victory. It was a bang-up six-rounder, the fighters standing toe to toe and slugging from the first bell.

The semifinal saw Al Gilbert, 163-pound local fighter, win a technical knockout over Lou Stahl, of Baltimore, after 50 seconds of the third round. Stahl, a willing but outclassed craftsman, went down three times in the second round for counts of eight, again for no count and once he was draped helplessly on the ropes by Gilbert's vicious two-handed attack. Referee Eddie LaFond stopped the proceedings on Stahl's first collapse in the third, though the latter was still very much willing.

"The big trouble," he barked, "seems to be that many clubs have men handling their business who cannot follow instructions of any kind. I'd advise clubs to waste no money on a secretary who can't do the job the way it should be done."

Bramham said the 41 leagues in the association reported a total attendance of 18,500,000 during the last year, a new record, but that the figure probably should be half a million higher.

"I can't even get, confidentially, the exact attendance figures from some of the club owners," he protested, "because you're afraid they'll get you into income tax trouble or something. Sometimes you give a different report to your league president than you do to me."

City Basketball Titlists Pin 1939-40 Hopes on Custer

Eastern Squad of 86 Slashed as Dec. 18 Opener With G. W. High Draws Near

Four days before Eastern High's first basketball outing of the season—against George Washington High on December 19—Coach John MacBride will make an announcement that will either end his team's chances of successfully defending Eastern's city championship or make those chances very bright indeed.

That announcement will concern the ability of lanky Bob Custer to take part in the White Tide's schedule. On the 15th of the month a doctor will thoroughly examine Custer's shoulder, injured during a football practice, and on his verdict hinges most of the club's hopes.

Another prime choice to capture one of the Eastern starting berths, Bob Byer, will definitely be out of action until after Christmas. His broken leg also was suffered in football.

Squad Reduced

With the future thus considered in doubt, Coach MacBride is doing all in his power to put his survivors in perfect shape. Yesterday he reduced his squad, which numbered 86 youngsters when the first call for basketmen was sounded three weeks ago, to a mere 45. But what hopes the remaining players had of finally crimmaging instead of going through dull fundamental drills were shattered. Anxious to build from the ground up, MacBride kept his charges at their pass-and-shoot work.

Of the 45 boys, only one is a sure starter. He's Moe Shulman, the frail lad who transferred at the end of the 1938-39 season from Tech. He and Custer, who was a standout at Western before moving to Eastern, are the brightest individual stars on the club.

Another Headache

Their individuality, as a matter of fact, furnishes another head ache for McBride. The manual training teacher turned coach, or vice versa, is an ardent advocate of team play and both Shulman and Custer must be developed anew.

Also on the Tide roster, and the only other lettermen, are Warren Erhardt, a shifty and lightning-fast forward; Rex Hartley, towering center, and Adriani, husky guard.

The best of the newcomers at this writing seems to be Neil Craig, a converted football backfield man with a pleasing aggressiveness; Al Helvestine, diminutive forward, and such unproved youngsters as Johnny Richmond, Michey Di Pietro, Joe Essex, Harold Bobb, Ed Abner, Les Cicala and Melvin Roughner. Sol Bassin, younger brother of one of Eastern's greatest players, Harry, and the Poston twins may see some action.

Besides its home-and-home clash with G. W. High, Eastern has reciprocal agreements with Gonzaga and St. John's. Bethesda-Chevy Chase is down on the card for a single game. Two games with Washington-Lee High have not been definitely decided upon yet, a fact which has held up release of the schedule for some time.

six records, two in scoring and four in ground-gaining, by running up 298 points and 3,988 yards against opponents. Washington and Green Bay also exceeded the former 11-game marks in these departments of play, contributing largely to a new total league scoring high of 1,692 points, 208 points more than last year's peak and an average of 30 points a game.

New York, with 17 field goals in one season, reached a new acme in this specialty, and was instrumental in elevating the league total to a peak of 55. Each new mark is better by seven than previous accomplishments. Detroit tied another field goal mark with four successful placements in one game.

The only record withstanding the 1939 National League onslaught was 2,885 yards rushing made by Detroit in 1936.

Vols and Aggies Get $85,000 Bids To Cotton Bowl

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 4 (U.P.).—The Dallas Cotton Bowl made its bid for the major New Year's Day football game tonight with a formal invitation to Texas A. & M. College and Tennessee to play for the "national championship."

Both schools were offered a flat guarantee of $85,000 cash to meet in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day. The offer was the largest ever made a football team for a single game.

Feldman Takes Edge on Taylor

Baltimore, Dec. 4 (AP).—Lew Feldman, of New York, won a 10-round decision over Bucky Taylor, of Baltimore, tonight, giving him a two-to-one edge in their series of three fights.

The fight was fast and close all the way. Feldman, who weighed 134 to Taylor's 138¼, rallied in the late rounds to overtake Taylor's early lead.

Lew Raymond, 145, Baltimore, won a six-round decision over El Brookman, 152, Washington, in the semi-final.

Canadian All-Stars Meet Palace Netters

The Chevy Chase Ice Palace table tennis team will play host to Canada's traveling All-Stars next month, it was announced yesterday. The match looms as one of the most attractive ever scheduled here.

Heading the invaders will be "Jay Jay" Desjardines and Pierre Chapdelaine, two of the Dominion's outstanding paddle wielders. Stars of the Ice Palace team are Stanley Fields and Harry Cook, professionals of the uptown courts.

Lesnevich to Meet Clark on New Year's

Detroit, Dec. 4 (AP).—Promoter John L. Nelson announced today that he has signed Gus Lesnevich, New Jersey light-heavyweight, for a ten-round bout with Dave Clark, Detroit Negro, here on the afternoon of New Year's Day.

Lesnevich knocked out Clark in the first round of a bout at Nutley, N. J., several months ago.

Starlet Bowl Seeks New York High Team

Miami, Fla., Dec. 4 (AP).—Florida's committee for getting a Christmas Day Starlet Bowl football game in Miami urged today that Seward Park High School of New York City be chosen to represent the North.

The recommendation was sent to a national committee, headed by Grantland Rice, that will have the final say on picking an opponent as Southern representative—probably Miami High School.

Three Baseball Players Are Denied U. S. Aid

Baltimore, Dec. 4 (AP).—Claims of three baseball players in the Eastern Shore League for unemployment compensation have been rejected by the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board, William Milnes Maloy, chairman, said today. Their names were not disclosed.

The commission recently turned down similar applications from three members of the Baltimore Orioles of the International League.

Santini Leads In Columbian Pin Victory

430 Set Is Helpful In District League Odd-Game Triumph

Columbia missed a clean sweep over Mount Rainier in the District League last night when the Suburban team won the third game by a two-pin margin.

Tony Santini's big 430 set led the Columbians to a high game count of 668 and a 1,907 set total, compared to the 1,759 three-game total of the losers. Fitzwater was high for the Mounts, and his 146 in the final game was the big factor in the 613 to 611 count in favor of the hosts.

LUCKY STRIKE

Buddy Teachum accounted for four strikes in a row in Graphic Arts League section at Lucky Strike, and his 165 game helped National Capital Press score a shutout triumph over Standard Press. Top set of the night was a 391 by Elvin Shanks, while the teams were topped by Judd and Detweiler with a 638 game and 1,827 set. They won two from Nave Composition.

Jack Perrell and Johnny Anderson divided the honors in the Electrical League at Lucky Strike, Perrell, rolling for Wise Electric, had 144 and Anderson a 396 set for the Cameos. The teams also split high game and set, Wise with 599 and Cameo, 1,673.

Transit's 600 team game and 1,719 set were tops in the Kilowatt League, while Distribution produced the individual leader in Dwyer, who counted 157 and 376.

Margaret Miltner posted a season's mark in the What's In a Name League at Lucky Strike with a 347 set, while Wilda Dixon, with 339, led Aggies to the second season's record of the night, a 1,566 set and a triple triumph over State.

ARCADIA

Jimmy Liston and his Purchasing teammates monopolized the Southern Railway Clerks League action at Arcadia, Liston rolling 147 and 352 and the team a 578 game and 1,559 set.

Harry Penfold, a Lithos team member in the Navy Department loop, was high with 150 and 374, while Hydrographics led the teams with 589 and 1,725.

Astor Clarke was back among the Federal League leaders at Arcadia, averaging 125 per game for a 375 set, while high game went to Tingle, with a 153 for GAO. Capital Power Plant stole the show among the teams with 595—1,721.

BROOKLAND

The lead changed hands for the third time in as many weeks in Odd Fellows League duckpins at Brookland, Amity No. 2 taking the first place spot this time, led by a 1,639 team set. Frank Donaldson's 138—391 topped the set totals.

American Hockey 'Gate' Shows Gain

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The International-American Hockey League has shown an increased attendance of 15 per cent for the first five games played by each of the nine clubs, Maurice Podoloff, league president, said here today.

Podoloff, here to make a report on the nine-club setup to the league's governors, said the showing of the newest member, the Indianapolis Capitals, currently in first place, was "very encouraging."

the squad in the gathering at Harvey's, but Redskin players voted Dick Todd the outstanding Washington player on the field at the Polo Grounds.

Todd, whose tricky gallops with the ball was the prize feature of the Redskins' performance, will receive a $100 award posted by Dr. Robert E. Moran, the club physician, for the player whom the Redskins decided was their brightest star in the game.

Despite the argument that is raging over the decision of Referee Bill Halloran on Bo Russell's last-minute placement attempt, the Redskins plan no appeal for a reversal, Flaherty said. The Redskins' coach cited the rule book which gives the referee sole authority over the score.

34½ Shares Voted

Redskin players voted to divide their share of the championship game purse into 34½ shares, with full shares going to the 33 players and Trainer Doc Mauro, and a half share voted to Hal Bradley, an end who was with the club only a few weeks.

As one of the second-place teams, the Redskins will divide 5 per cent of the net gate of the Packers-Giants game at Milwaukee next Sunday for the league title. If the gate attains the expected $80,000 maximum, each Redskin share will net approximately $100.

Last night the Redskins started to disperse to their various winter homes. Sammy Baugh will be occupied with his sheep ranch at Sweetwater, Tex., and Halfback Jimmy Johnston will return to the operation of his butcher shop at Caldwell, Idaho.

Squad Scatters

Halfback Dick Todd is heading back to Texas, where he is a geologist in the oil fields, and Center Vic Carroll will accept a position with the Census Bureau in California. Fullback Max Krause will return to Spokane, Wash., where he is in the automobile business, and Guard Clem Stralka will rejoin the White Plains (N. J.) Recreational Department.

Center Mickey Parks will undergo an operation on his injured knee in Washington before proceeding to his Oklahoma home and Halfback Wilbur Moore will return to the operation of his tavern on the Minnesota campus. Wee Willie Wilkin is returning to a job in the California steel plant of his father.

End Charlie Malone and Halfback Don Irwin will resume their insurance business in Washington and Capt. Turk Edwards will also remain in Washington as an associate with an automobile firm. Andy Farkas, who will be married this month, also may make his winter home here. End Wayne Millner will return from his Salem, Mass., home in the spring to assist Catholic University with football practice.

Marcopolis To Feature A. A. U. Bouts

Veteran of College Tangles Will Meet 'Red' Vernon Friday

If college experience means anything in the current A. A. U. boxing tournament, Leo Marcopolis has a large lead on the field in the race for the novice 126-pound championship.

Leo battles the tournament favorite Friday night at Turner's Arena, where he engages the popular Reds Vernon in a semifinal bout, but his college coaching may give him the edge. Two years ago the personable Greek youngster, who sports the spangles of Police Boys Club No. 5, boxed for Columbus University and had the advantage of Jim McNamara's smart coaching.

This year he's under Al Farrell, another broad-beamed Irishman who campaigned as a heavyweight for the University of Maryland several years ago and has since turned his talent to tutoring ambitious young pillow-pushers. Added to this background is Leo's native ability to handle himself in a two-fisted engagement, which bodes no good for Master Vernon.

Marcopolis, now employed by the Railroad Retirement Board, is a charter member of the club he represents, and one of the leaders in the youth movement. Nineteen years of age he has helped out around the club in the role of assistant counselor and coach, two years ago pilotng the Peewee baseball team to second place in the Boys Club League.

Oddly enough Leo is a southpaw like the only other Greek lad in the tournament, Billy Kekeris, and while his knockout wallop isn't as deadly as Billy's, his timing and ring generalship are better and he gets the most out of his blows. Boxing four years now, Marcopolis was an early victim in last year's Golden Gloves tournament, bowing out in the second round, but it takes more than one licking to make him quit.

Two Former G.W. Courtmen to Clash

Two former George Washington University courtmen will tangle in the Heurich Brewers' local debut here Thursday night, Ben Goldfadden, of the local pros, and Mickey Schonfeld, of the visiting Wilkes-Barre Barons.

Goldfadden will guard Schonfeld, fourth high scorer in the league when he played with the Brewers last year. The Brewers scrimmaged with the Fort Belvoir Soldiers last night, and have another two-hour practice session on tap today. Thursday's game starts at 9:15.

Wheat Prices Rally After Early Selling

Closings Are More Than Cent a Bushel Above Morning Lows

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Displaying strong recuperative power, wheat prices today rallied from early ⅞ cent declines and closed ⅛ to ⅝ higher than Saturday, continuing the upturn which in a week has added 3 to 5 cents to values.

Early profit-taking contributed to the decline, but when December had slipped to 92¼ and May to 88¾ the recovery got under way. Each ¼ point advance attracted short covering and the rally was not halted until gains of more than a cent from early lows had been recorded. The highs of 93½ and 89⅞ were just short of Saturday's best levels, which for December was the highest price in two years. Closing futures were 93⅜@93½ and 89¾@89⅞ for December and May.

The heavy movement of wheat from Canada and Argentina, indicating improved foreign demand, better domestic flour trade and the critical Southwestern drought situation were factors behind the buying. Export sales of North American grain totaled 600,000 bushels, including 400,000 Canadian wheat, 100,000 barley and 100,000 bushels of United States rye.

Corn Closing Higher

Corn closed ¼ to ⅝ up, December, 53¼@53⅜; May, 54⅜@54¾; oats unchanged to ¼ higher; soy beans, ¼ to ½ up; rye, ¼ to ⅜ higher and lard 2 to 8 lower.

Some buying of wheat was associated with the sharp rally of Winnipeg prices. Reports from there indicated the wheat board did little selling. Out of 12,218,000 bushels of wheat exported in the world last week, the largest since the war began, Canada contributed almost half.

Milling interests also were in the wheat pit and reports from the Southwest indicated flour bookings as well as production have expanded materially. The first deliveries of wheat on December contracts are to be made here tomorrow. Notice was filed that 14,000 bushels will be tendered.

Corn prices also rallied after an early decline, with some of the buying credited to exporters. Rumors of recently improved export business were confirmed by figures showing 1,495,000 bushels were shipped last week against 385,000 the previous week and 405,000 a year ago.

New Cotton Futures Fall 50c Per Bale

Spot Interests Sell; Old Crop Contracts 4 Up to 4 Down

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The cotton futures market stumbled after early gains today. Spot interests started hammering at the new October delivery, which closed 10 points down, while old contracts were up 4 to down 4. Brokers said the price movements tended to bring nearby and distant months closer to their usual relationship following Saturday's distortions.

Early gains followed the pattern set at Bombay but the list abruptly went into reverse when the Liverpool market took a late drop. Selling by large spot interests was offset by purchases in March but the decline at Liverpool, in view of recent sharp climbs, made traders generally a little uneasy.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures moved to cancel morning losses late today, but were still unchanged to 5 points lower at the finish. Early pressure was in line with declines in lard and heavy Western hog markets, but when mill interests lifted hedges against sales of refined oil, the list slanted forward. Sales totaled 72 lots: December, 6.45 bid; March, 6.67; May, 6.79 bid; July, 6.88.

A moderate amount of crude oil sold in the Southeast and Valley at the unchanged price of 5½ cents. Texas quoted 5½ nominal.

Commercial Loans Dip During Week

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks declined slightly last week, breaking a run of five consecutive weekly advances. The Federal Reserve Board said that banks in 101 leading cities reduced such loans $7,000,000 to $4,381,000,000 in the week ended November 29.

In the last 15 weeks, business loans have increased 13 weeks and decreased 2, for a net gain of $469,000,000 in the 101 cities. Last week New York banks accounted for $6,000,000 of the $7,000,000 decrease.

N. Y. Stock Values Drop 2 Billion in November

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Shares listed in New York Stock Exchange last month lost nearly $2,000,000,000 in market worth, the New York Stock Exchange disclosed today.

The issues on November 30 had a total market value of $45,505,228,611, compared with $47,373,972,773 a month earlier, a decline of $1,868,744,162. A year ago listed shares had a market worth of $46,081,192,347. The average market value was $31.79 a share, compared with $33.11 at the end of October and $32.30 at the end of November, 1938.

Zinc Cut to Six Cents

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Leading zinc interests today lowered the price of the metal ½ cent a pound to 6 cents, East St. Louis basis. This carried the quotation back to within a cent a pound of where it was at the start of September when the European war brought a series of advances that resulted in a net boost of 1½ cents a pound in that month.

Money Markets

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—A drop of ½ cent in the Canadian dollar was the foreign exchange market's chief reaction to the new British policy, inaugurated today, of trying to hamstring German exports.

U. S. Rubber May Acquire Fisk Company

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The New York Sun said today that preliminary discussions have been held for acquisition of Fisk Rubber Co. by the United States Rubber Co.

"Negotiations have not yet progressed far enough for definite terms to be considered," said the newspaper, adding that last week Fisk officials denied the company was to be sold.

Fisk Rubber turns out around 3,750,000 automobile tires annually at its plant at Chicopee Falls, Mass., and makes other rubber goods and automobile accessories. Assets at the end of 1938 totaled $13,732,000.

Assets of United States Rubber, according to its latest annual statement, were $170,136,000. Maker of auto tires and other rubber products, principal domestic U. S. rubber plants are in Detroit, Indianapolis, Los Angeles and other cities in Wisconsin, South Carolina, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Insurance Stocks At High for Year

New York, Dec. 4.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market continued to advance during the past week, again closing at new high levels for the year, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on December 1 was 000 at the close of the previous week, $630,453,000, compared with $620,492,- an increase of $9,961,000, or 1.61- per cent.

New York City bank stocks held steady during the past week, with fractional gains recorded at the close. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on December 1 was $1,540,720,000, compared with $1,540,609,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of 0.01 per cent.

Lumber Shipments 77 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber movement during the holiday week ended November 25, 1939, in relation to the seasonal weekly averages of 1929, was production, 67 per cent; shipments, 77 per cent; orders, 63 per cent, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of representative softwood and hardwood mills.

Compared with the average of the preceding ten weeks, reported lumber production of the holiday week ended November 25, showed decline of 15 per cent, new business and shipments decline of 33 per cent and 17 per cent, respectively.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Apathy Chief Feature of the Day's Trading; Foreign Selling Fades Without New Buying; Finland Six Per Cents Drop Sharply

New York, Dec. 4.—The stock that was the most active on the big board today had a turnover of only 15,000 shares. That should furnish some idea of the extreme dullness that prevailed, for 15,000 shares is nothing more than an ordinary opening block when things are humming in Wall Street. Nothing is humming there now except the wind as it whirls around the vacant offices. Wall Street firms are equipped to handle a big business, but they don't know when they're going to get it. The volume on the big board today was only 427,815 shares, the smallest since last July 11.

In such a market it is obvious that fluctuations of the leaders were insignificant. The composite average showed a loss of 0.08 point. Aviations, the store stocks and steels were generally lower while a slightly higher trend prevailed in the utilities and motors, but in no group was there any change worthy of special mention. Curtiss-Wright was the day's most active stock, closing unchanged at its price of 10 and Loft, for a brief spell, had a run-up based on rumors of a special Pepsi-Cola dividend. It held only an eighth of its gain. The largest fluctuation in the group of the fifteen most active stocks was in United Air Lines, and its gain was only ⅝ point. Relatively inactive Johns Manville added 2 points while Union Carbide lost 1½ and Westinghouse was off nearly a point. These swings were decidedly the exception to the rule, however.

Steel Operations

The course of business is being watched closely by the street, with the beginning of the last month of the year, and the consensus is that some tapering off from the relatively high level must be expected. This was true in the case of steel operations for this week, as reported today by the American Iron & Steel Institute. Operations are placed at 92.8 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1.6 points or 1.7 per cent from the 94.4 per cent figure which ruled last week.

Steel operations have been on a steady upgrade since Labor Day, broken only by an insignificant decline during the week beginning October 23. In the week of September 4 they were as low as 58.6 per cent, from which level they began their almost unbroken advance of 35.8 points to a rate which meant that the steel industry was turning out more ingots than ever before in its history. This march was packed into the space of 12 weeks.

Basis of Rise Is Domestic

Other major indices have followed a somewhat similar course, although their rate of gain has not been as sensational as that of the steel makers. Of more importance than the general advance has been the fact that it has been accomplishd on the basis of domestic buying, with war orders playing a minor role. With the single exception of the aviation industry, there is no important arm of American business which can be said to have reaped a harvest on the woes of Europe. The explanation is that prior to the outbreak of the war, American consumers were buying on a hand-to-mouth basis. They have departed from this policy now and have realized the wisdom of building up moderate inventories.

Finnish Bonds Slump

War news today had no unusual effect upon our market except that bonds of the Nordic countries again were under pressure. Finland's 6s dropped as low as 32, closing at 34½, off 20⅞, and pressure also was noted in the market for Denmark and Norwegian issues. United States Government bonds were firm.

Whereas foreign selling has been a factor in the recent decline in our stock market, this is believed to have dried up at the present stage. Of course, there is no foreign buying, although it is permissible from Amsterdam and from Switzerland and similar neutral points. Buying also would be permitted to foreigners with balances on deposit here. There is no buying, but the pressure of liquidation has been stopped, indicating that France and Great Britain are holding off while our market is in its present sick state.

Among the major commodities today the trend was irregular, with wheat rallying at the close to end the session, up ⅛ to ⅝ cent a bushel. Favoring the rally were heavy movements of Canadian and Argentine wheat into world trade, and also the critical Southwestern crop situation. Cotton was mixed, closing 4 points higher to 10 points lower, with hedging sales partially offset by foreign buying.

Finnish and Scandinavian obligations featured bond trading today, with selling pressures increased as the Russian army continued its assault on the world's most trustworthy creditor. The break of 20⅞ points in the Finnish 6s featured, but there were other sharp declines, notably one of 11½ points in the Helsingfors 6½s.

Oslo City 4½s dropped 2⅞, Norway 4½s were down 4¼, the 6s were off 2⅝ and the 4½s were off 4½ points. In the balance of the foreign list and in domestic corporates the trend was irregularly lower but with losses moderate.

United States Governments were firm but trading was quiet on the listed market. Late closing prices in counter dealings were little changed from the big board quotations.

Major moves in miscellaneous issues were few and far between. A good demand for Warren Brothers 6s lifted this issue 3 points. Saguenay Power 4¼s fell away 4 points on a few sales and the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis issues were under pressure.

Canada's Budget Anticipates War For Three Years

Cleveland, Dec. 4.—Canada is making definite preparations for a three-year war and has scheduled expenditures, domestic and for war purposes, at an all-time high, according to the magazine Steel today.

Ordinary government expenses for the current year total some $500,000,000 and involve only $72,000,000 for defense. For the coming fiscal year, starting April 1, 1940, it may be necessary to budget an aggregate outlay of $750,000,000.

Finance Minister Ralston declares the Canadian government is planning for a three-year war, and estimates the dominion's military efforts will cost about $315,000,000 the first year, or 50 per cent more than all the Canadian war costs up to March, 1916, in the World War.

Since the first of September the war supply board, headed by Wallace R. Campbell, has contracted for or is negotiating supplies and Canadian defense projects costing $25,000,000 in all; special equipment from Britain amounting to $9,000,000, airplanes and components costing nearly $10,000,000 from the United States.

Canada, stated the minister, plans construction of antisubmarine and minesweeping craft in its own shipyards and is considering, in consultation with Britain, the construction of larger vessels.

Brokers' Loans Higher

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reported today that the collateral borrowings of members, as of the close of business November 30, totaled $573,871,683, compared with $534,228,504 on October 31.

Most Active Stocks In N. Y. Curb Week

New York, Dec. 4.—Ten stocks accounted for 230,800 shares, or approximately 27 per cent of the total volume of 852,190 shares dealt in last week on the New York Curb Exchange. Total volume in the preceding week was 690,520 shares, while in the week ended December 3, 1938, volume totaled 957,680 shares.

Fisk Rubber was the week's volume leader, with a turnover of 55,200 shares, followed by Electric Bond & Share with 32,400; Centrigugal Pipe Corp., 26,700; Republic Aviation, 23,300; Louisiana Land & Exploration, 23,100 and Lockheed Aircraft, 17,300.

A. & P. Stores Appeal To U. S. Supreme Court

The Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday from a decision upholding a Federal Trade Commission order requiring the chain store firm to cease alleged violations of the Robinson-Patman act.

The 1936 act prohibits payments of allowances to buyers or sellers except for services rendered and makes it unlawful for anyone to be a party to a purchase which discriminates against the purchaser's competitors. The chain denied the Trade Commission's contention that the company had received from sellers of goods allowances or discounts, in lieu of brokerage, upon purchases where no services were rendered.

Business Failures

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the week ended November 30 totaled 200, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Thanksgiving celebration in 23 States cut into the figure. This compared with 191 in the preceding week, which also included the Thanksgiving holiday in many States. The total for the comparable full week last year was 207.

Banking Firm Protests Bond Sale to Morgan

Otis & Co., Cleveland, Offer Higher Price For Utility Issue

By the Associated Press

Otis & Co., Cleveland investment firm, attempted yesterday to intervene in a securities commission hearing to determine whether Consumers Power Co. of Jackson, Mich., should be permitted to sell $28,594,000 of bonds and 125,000 shares of common stock.

The Cleveland firm, represented by former Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio, was publicly offered to buy the securities at higher prices than arranged for under their distribution by consumers power.

The prospect of reselling the securities at a profit was said by William R. Daley of Cleveland, president of Otis & Co., to be a primary motive in intervening. He added this his firm and other Western bankers also were interested in the general principle of Western bankers handling Western financing.

Justin Whiting, Consumers Power attorney, objected to the Otis intervention, and Edwin C. Johnson, presiding examiner, authorized Bulkley to participate in the hearing only pending a formal decision by the commission later on.

Michigan Bankers Object

Harold H. Armstrong, Detroit attorney representing a number of Michigan investment bankers who expect to be associated with Otis & Co. if it gets the financing deal, also asked permission to intervene.

Consumers Power had planned to sell all the common stock at $28.25 per share to the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, which already owns all the other common stock, and had planned to sell the bonds publicly through a group of investment bankers headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., and Bonbright & Co.

An interested spectator was Wendell Willkie, Commonwealth & Southern president. Willkie told reporters that the only reason for the stock issue was to provide a method for Commonwealth & Southern to supply needed cash to the consumers power. He denied that Consumers Power would lose anything by the price stipulated for the common stock. Commonwealth & Southern, he asserted, was willing to supply the cash without any additional stock issue.

Germany Unable To Fulfill Pact With Argentina

Buenos Aires, Dec. 4.—The status of trade deals between Argentina and Germany and how they were affected by the war, was explained today by the Argentine minister of agriculture. In this statement, the ministry says that the German government has intimated its inability at present to comply with the terms of its agreement with Argentina involving 100,000 tons of wheat and 8,000 tons of wool valued at 15,000,000 pesos, about half of which was shipped prior to the outbreak of hostilities.

While Germany has not shipped locomotives and railway cars which were part of the deal, it is stated that Argentina has covered the value of her shipments by German merchandise either received prior to the outbreak of war, still en route to Argentina, or delivered to neutral ports.

These goods consist mostly of materials for the ministries of war and marine. The railroad material involved in the deal included 900 wagons, 64 locomotives and 40 sleeping cars, which was to have been delivered in December or January, but which cannot now be shipped.

It is understood that only part of the wheat tonnage shipped since the war reached Germany, owing to the Allied blockade. The Argentine authorities have circularized local banks with a view to ascertaining the exact state of the balance of payments, which they expect to show a small favorable balance due to Argentina.

Steel Operations Dip to 92.8 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The rate of operations of steel mills will decline this week to 92.8 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. The decline, of 1.6 points, from last week's rate of 94.4 per cent, is the second since Labor Day. The first occurred in the week of October 25. A month ago the rate was 92.5 per cent of capacity and a year ago 59.5 per cent.

Stevens, Hall-Mills Case Figure, Dies

Lavallette, N. J., Dec. 4 (AP).—Henry H. Stevens, 70, who with his sister and brother was acquitted of murder in the Hall-Mills case, sensational double-slaying of 17 years ago, died yesterday after a lengthy illness.

Stevens, a noted sportsman, his brother, Willie, and their sister, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, were indicted in 1926 for the murder of Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, a choir singer slain on September 14, 1922, with the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of a fashionable New Brunswick church.

PDS Presents Sorority Songstress

The feature artist on the PDS program today will be Miss Florence F. Small, 20 Arundel avenue, Hyattsville, Md. Miss Small, who has had radio, dramatic and theatrical experience and is her accompanist, will be heard over Station WMAL. She is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and Alpha Psi Omega.

MISS SMALL

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The reason tournament players feel so free in passing partner's opening bid is that at duplicate it is generally a losing proposition to allow the adversaries to play the hand at a low part score. With any fighting strength at all fourth hand will attempt a bid or double rather than let his enemies have the contract so cheaply. Of course, he may be occasionally trapped by a player who passed his partner's opening bid with real strength, but it is worth the gamble he thinks.

This hand taken from S. Garton Churchill's case-book shows how a pair reached game though the opposing side opened the bidding.

Both sides vulnerable East dealer:

NORTH: ♠ J 6 2 ♡ 7 5 3 ◇ Q J 5 ♣ J 10 6 4

WEST: ♠ A 7 3 ♡ A Q 4 ◇ K 10 8 4 ♣ Q 5 3

EAST: ♠ K 8 ♡ J 10 9 8 6 ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ A 9 7

SOUTH: ♠ Q 10 9 5 4 ♡ K 2 ◇ A 9 6 ♣ K 8 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Only those players who know their partners will reopen the bidding with the slightest excuse will dare pass the West hand the first round.

Amphibian's Crew Tells of Night Adrift on Waves

Reprinted from Yesterday's Late Edition.

Salem, Mass., Dec. 3 (AP).—A story of a "lucky landing" on the choppy Atlantic Ocean was told tonight by four Coast Guardsmen as their $60,000 amphibian plane, battered by waves, was towed into Rockport Harbor after drifting since late yesterday.

They revealed they had reached a point over land on their return to the service's air base here from a routine patrol flight but that, darkness and dwindling of fuel had forced them to go 16 miles out to sea so they could alight.

Lieut. Comdr. Roy L. Raney, in charge of the flight, described it as a "lucky landing"—without damage on a rough sea.

In the night, however, while Coastguard vessels fanned seaward in search, the ocean damaged the plane's rudder, elevators and stabilizers.

Listen! with Slocum

Although the plush lined studios of New York and Hollywood are better publicized, our own struggling little colony on the banks of the Potomac is one of the most important radio centers in the nation.

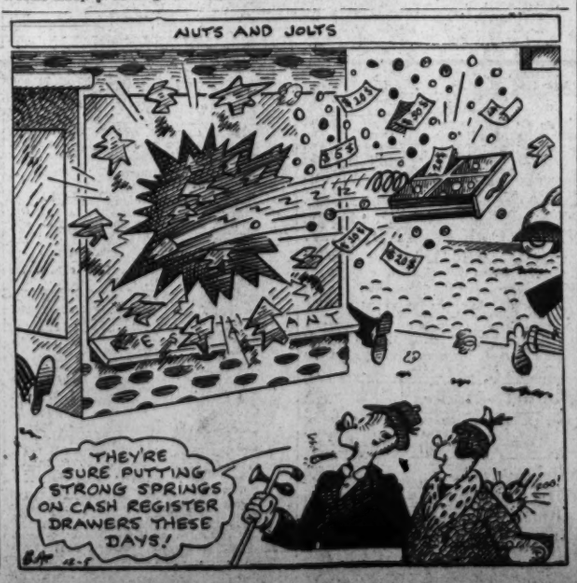
So important, in fact, that the three major networks install forces of talented ladies and gentlemen in great numbers and occasionally at some expense. The Washington announcer, for instance, is known the length and breadth of the trade for his talent for description. Description without script, too.

The Washington technicians are tops. The engineers employed in Washington studios have all proven they had a flair of intelligent action to go along with the essential mechanical phase of their work.

In common with most things in Washington the reason for this concentration of talent, leads directly to the Hill and 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. Senators, Representatives, Cabinet members and Chief Executives have found this comparatively new gadget called radio an excellent medium for getting their ideas over to the populace. It's fairly difficult for a man to misquote himself when he's reading a speech, so the boys very often like to make their feelings known via radio and fervently pray that (a) the newspapers will find them interesting enough to deserve the immortality of newsprint and (b) when that immortality is gained the quotations will be long and accurate.

It is obviously important that these political messages go out without hitch or bias. Slipshod announcing or technical work might mar their presentation and leave the network concerned open to charges of political chicanery. So all the speeches go out to the nation with the very minimum of technical or vocal mistakes and to assure the perpetuation of this, all three networks keep Washington well loaded with bright young men.

Alan Lomax, the Library of Congress's folk song specialist, is currently running a series on WJSV and the C. B. S. network exploring the folk music of the United States. He is heard each Tuesday from 9:15 to 9:45 a. m. and this morning he will sing the songs of teamsters and raftsmen.



"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS

It was two weeks since Dr. Chris Arden completed his internship and started a practice of his own. His first mistake was to rent an office and room from the shiftless Walters family but he had felt sorry for mild, inefficient Henry Walters and his drab, listless wife, Lily. They obviously needed the money. His sympathy did not lessen when he thought of their lazy daughter, Katie, and ne'er-do-well son, Dick. Descending to his office, Chris is annoyed to find it dusty. He cleans it himself.

Chapter 3

When he had finished his dusting, he put his handkerchief back in his pocket, lighted the first cigarette of the day, and sat down to contemplation.

His thoughts were not entirely happy. He was alone in the world. He had no family and, outside the hospital, no friends. His vacations for years had been spent with an old uncle, a country doctor halfway across the State, but he had not seen him for a long time. Yet it was to old Dave Mortimer that he owed the fact that he was sitting where he was that morning, behind him some 11 years of college, medical school, and hospital. One day old Dave, breeder of tall taciturn sons, militant Christian and doctor and father confessor to the entire county, had reached out and, picking up a not overclean hand, had examined it carefully.

"Good hands," he said. "Maybe do surgery some day. Why not study medicine, Chris? None of mine wants it, but it's a man's job."

That had been the start. The big old figure on the tall horse, alternately profane and pious, had been romance to him. Sometimes he came in at dawn, gray-faced from some night of trouble, and everybody kept out of his way. But if there had been a death, he would shut himself in his office for a while, and the boys said he was praying. Then he would stomp out to his breakfast, truculent and vital once more.

So far as Chris knew, he had never boiled an instrument, and he had forbidden his wife, Letitia, even to look into his saddlebags. But Chris had done so once, and had found in one a chain from a bridle, a case of long-handled knives, a dentist's forceps, a splint or two, and a rusty horseshoe.

Chris smiled at the memory. He had had something, the old boy. It was some dynamic force, some flow of vitality which seemed to spread from him to his patients. It was said that he had been known to sit silently for an hour holding an almost pulseless wrist; and that the pulse would grow stronger, minute by minute. It was, they said, as though he were fighting death by sheer will power. And after the crisis was passed he could scarcely stand up on his feet.

Chris was still thinking of Dave Mortimer when there was a knock at the door and Katie Walters came in, looking sulky and carrying a dustcloth.

"Mother said I was to do the offices."

"Not now, Katie," he said with dignity. "At any moment the bell may ring, and some wealthy patient may step out of a carriage and enter."

Katie, however, was not to be appeased. For one thing she was looking her worst and knew it. She wore a blue blouse, not too clean, and a sagging skirt. But he thought, idly watching her flick at the chairs in morose silence, that she was probably rather a pretty girl.

"Listen," he said, "do you always spend Sunday in hating the world?"

"I only hate smart-aleck young men who spend all morning in the bathroom."

He laughed out loud at that. "And how about little girls who use the tub and don't clean it afterward?"

She flushed with anger. "I'm not a little girl. I'm 17, if that interests you."

"You surprise me," he said gravely. "I had no idea you had reached that extreme age. But to return you, so to speak, to the bathtub——"

Perhaps fortunately for him the doorbell rang just then, and Katie dropped her duster and flew to a front window.

"It's a girl," she said excitedly. "It's the Lewis girl, Doctor. You know, the big stone house on the hill."

"Get away from that window," he said sternly. "And for heaven's sake get out of sight. Where's your mother? She may look better than you do. She can't look worse!"

Katie gave him an infuriated look and disappeared, and—the bell ringing again with no sign of Lily—he opened the door himself. On the top step was a young woman looking both embarrassed and alarmed, and under her arm she carried a dog. Years later he had still only to close his eyes to see her there, direct-eyed, slim, and lovely, gazing up at him with that absurd dog under her arm; and to struggle with an old hurt, a savage resentment against what life had done to them both. But at the moment he was merely apologetic.

"Sorry," he said, "My household is rather disrupted this morning."

"Are you the doctor?"

"I am indeed. Do you want a doctor?" he asked.

"My dog does. I hope you don't mind, but he has a bone in his throat, and I can't find a veterinarian."

He stiffened slightly. Then he looked down at the black Scottish terrier in her arms, and his expression changed. After all, the dog was in trouble, and he liked dogs. He smiled cheerfully and threw the door wide open.

"Come in," he said. "I'm no dog doctor, but I'll see what I can do."

She followed him, even in the emergency carrying with her a certain young dignity and the poise of good breeding; and Chris, hurriedly getting his head mirror and a forceps and turning on a light, was aware of it, and of her, too. So this was Beverly Lewis, this girl with the steady eyes and the small determined chin! He shot a glance at her as he struggled into the white coat which was to protect his Sunday suit.

"Let's see him. We'll get it out, or at least we'll have a good try."

"I hate to bother you."

"No bother. Good thing to keep my hand in. Now, old man, let's have a look."

The dog himself was past caring. All that mattered to him was the next breath, and for a moment or two there was no other sound in the room. Then suddenly Chris held out a small object and grinned.

"There you are!" he said. "Came out like a tooth."

To his astonishment he saw that she was crying.

"Please don't," he said "He's all right now. Look at him."

The terrier, as a matter of fact, was all right once more. His mistress, however, was far from right. She was still silently crying, and at the same time fumbling for something and failing to find it.

"It's just relief," she said. "And of course I forgot my bag. I forgot everything. If you can lend me a handkerchief for a minute——"

Chris reached for his and brought it out. Then his horrified eyes saw that it was filthy from the morning dusting. The girl saw it, too, and smiled through her tears.

"Sorry," he said. "I was doing my morning housework! I'll get you a towel."

But there was, of course, no towel. Strict orders that at least three clean towels hang by the corner washstand meant little to the Walters family. A hurried excursion up the front stairs to find Dick's door still locked, a rush down and up the back stairs to the bathroom, to find none there, and a brief but violent explosion from Chris in the kitchen, finally produced one, but the fact that the dog had regarded it as a game and had rushed after him barking did nothing to ease the situation.
